

1 MARK BRNOVICH
2 ATTORNEY GENERAL
3 Drew C. Ensign (No. 25463)
4 Deputy Solicitor General
5 Robert J. Makar (No. 33579)
6 Jennifer J. Wright (No. 27145)
7 Assistant Attorneys General
8 2005 N. Central Avenue
9 Phoenix, Arizona 85004
10 Telephone: (602) 542-5200
11 Drew.Ensign@azag.gov

12 Attorneys for Intervenor-
13 Defendant State of Arizona

14 UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

15 DISTRICT OF ARIZONA

16 Arizonans for Fair Elections, et al.,
17 Plaintiffs,

18 vs.

19 Katie Hobbs, et al.,
20 Defendants,
21 and
22 State of Arizona,
23 Intervenor-Defendant.

Case No: 2:20-cv-00658-DWL

STATE OF ARIZONA'S CORRECTED
OPPOSITION TO PLAINTIFFS'
MOTION FOR A TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER AND
PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION (DOC. 2)

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

TABLE OF CONTENTS

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES	iii
INTRODUCTION	1
LEGAL STANDARD	3
ARGUMENT	3
I. PLAINTIFFS LACK ARTICLE III STANDING	3
II. PLAINTIFFS’ CLAIMS LACK MERIT	4
A. The Anderson-Burdick Framework Governs Plaintiffs’ Claims	4
B. The Challenged Acts Do Not Impose A “Severe Burden”	5
C. The Acts Survive “Less Exacting” Review.....	9
D. The First And Fourteenth Amendments Are Not A Source of Positive Rights	10
E. Plaintiffs’ Case Law Is Inapposite	11
F. Accepting Plaintiffs’ Arguments Would Have Grave Consequences	13
III. PLAINTIFFS HAVE NOT SATISFIED THE REMAINING REQUIREMENTS
FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF	14
A. Plaintiffs Have Not Demonstrated That They Are Likely To Suffer Irreparable
Harm	14
B. The Balance Of Equities Disfavors Plaintiffs’ Request.....	15
IV. PLAINTIFFS’ REQUESTED RELIEF IS UNWARRANTED	16
CONCLUSION	16

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

CASES	PAGE
Anderson v. United States , 612 F.2d 1112, 1115 (9th Cir. 1979)	16
Angle v. Miller , 673 F.3d 1122 (9th Cir. 2012)	2, 5, 7, 10, 12
Chamness v. Bowen , 722 F.3d 1110 (9th Cir. 2013)	8
Coalition for Economic Equity v. Wilson , 122 F.3d 718 (9th Cir. 1997)	15
DNC v. Bostelmann , No. 20-CV-249-WMC, 2020 WL 1320819 (W.D. Wis. Mar. 20, 2020)	12
Florida Democratic Party v. Scott , 215 F. Supp. 3d 1250 (N.D. Fla. 2016)	12
Jackson v. City of Joliet , 715 F.2d 1200 (7th Cir. 1983)	11
Maryland v. King , 133 S. Ct. 1 (2012)	15
Meyer v. Grant , 486 U.S. 414 (1988)	8
Nader v. Brewer , 531 F.3d 1028 (9th Cir. 2008)	4, 7
Nuclear Info. & Res. Serv. v. Nuclear Regulatory Comm’n , 457 F.3d 941 (9th Cir. 2006)	3
Omari Faulkner et al. v. Virginia Dep’t of Elections , CL-2000-1456-00 (Va. Cir. Ct. March 25, 2020)	12
Orantes-Hernandez v. Thornburgh , 919 F.2d 549 (9th Cir. 1990)	16
Prete v. Bradbury , 438 F.3d 949 (9th Cir. 2006)	1, 4, 5, 6, 9
Purcell v. Gonzalez , 549 U.S. 1 (2006)	9, 15
Randall v. Sorrell , 548 U.S. 230 (2006)	13
Regan v. Taxation With Representation of Wash. , 461 U.S. 540 (1983)	11
RNC v. DNC , ___ U.S. ___, 2020 WL 1672702 (U.S. Apr. 6, 2020)	12, 13, 15

CASES (cont.)	PAGE
Soltysik v. Padilla , 910 F.3d 438 (9th Cir. 2018).....	4
Stanwitz v. Reagan , 429 P.3d 1138 (Ariz. 2018).....	9
Summers v. Earth Island Inst. , 555 U.S. 488 (2009).....	1, 3
Timmons v. Twin Cities Area New Party , 520 U.S. 351 (1997).....	4
Weinberger v. Romero-Barcelo , 456 U.S. 305 (1982).....	15
Winter v. NRDC , 555 U.S. 7 (2008).....	3, 4, 14
Zamani v. Carnes , 491 F.3d 990 (9th Cir. 2007).....	4
STATUTES
A.R.S. § 19-112.....	9, 10
A.R.S. § 19-118.....	9
A.R.S. § 19-119.01.....	9
A.R.S. § 19-121.....	5
A.R.S. § 19-121.02.....	9
CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS
Ariz. Const. art. IV, Pt. 1, § 1(6)(C).....	10
Ariz. Const. art. IV, Pt. 1, § 1(9).....	1, 3, 10
OTHER AUTHORITIES
2017 Ariz. Sess. Laws, ch. 151 § 3	10

INTRODUCTION

Plaintiffs’ desire for relief from the coronavirus epidemic afflicting our nation is understandable. Hundreds of millions of Americans are struggling to perform tasks and exercise rights that have suddenly become substantially harder. But Plaintiffs’ Complaint and request for preliminary injunctive relief are badly miscast and fail to establish any basis for relief. This Court should therefore deny the request for a preliminary injunction.

As an initial matter, Plaintiffs lack standing. Plaintiffs ask this Court only to enjoin “measures under Title 19, Chapter 1, of the Arizona Revised Statutes (‘A.R.S.’), in so far as they prevent processing signatures in support of initiatives via Arizona’s secure online signature gathering system.” Doc. 2 at 3. But Plaintiffs somehow missed that the Arizona Constitution separately mandates that all petition signatures be “signed in the presence of the affiant [i.e., circulator].” Ariz. Const. art. IV, Pt. 1, § 1(9). Thus, even if the Court were to grant Plaintiffs the relief that they seek, Arizona law would still bar use of the E-Qual system for initiative petitions. As such, Plaintiffs have failed to establish it is “likely that a favorable judicial decision will prevent or redress the [alleged] injury.” Summers v. Earth Island Inst., 555 U.S. 488, 493 (2009).

Justiciability issues aside, Plaintiffs’ claims fail on the merits. Plaintiffs’ submissions do not establish that the challenged Acts impose a “severe burden” under the governing Anderson-Burdick framework. As such, strict scrutiny does not apply and the challenged provisions of Title 19 (the “Acts”) are constitutional if they “serve[] an important regulatory interest” and are “reasonably related” to that interest. Prete v. Bradbury, 438 F.3d 949, 970-71 (9th Cir. 2006). Plaintiffs do not even attempt to advance arguments under this “less exacting review” standard. Id. at 961.

This omission/waiver results in the lack of a “severe burden” being dispositive here. And Plaintiffs have failed to establish the lack of such a burden for several reasons. First, the pandemic has only affected a small portion—less than 10%—of the roughly 20 months of this election cycle available to collect signatures. That amount is not severe relative to the total available gathering time that Plaintiffs had for the 2020 cycle.

1 Second, the Ninth Circuit looks to whether “reasonably diligent” circulators can qualify
2 for the ballot under the law. Angle v. Miller, 673 F.3d 1122, 1133 (9th Cir. 2012). Here,
3 at least one initiative campaign has already collected approximately 300,000 signatures—
4 i.e., well in excess of the 237,645 signatures required (assuming a reasonable validity
5 rate)—and thus is likely to qualify for the ballot. Plaintiffs have made no showing that 6 they could not have been as diligent/effective as this campaign. Third, Plaintiffs’
7 submissions fail to establish that coronavirus will have a severe impact on their overall
8 efforts. Fourth, the Acts are viewpoint-neutral and even-handed: applying to all
9 initiatives regardless of their subject matter or position, which militates against finding a 10 severe burden. Fifth, the relief that Plaintiffs seek is actually less speech—i.e., the 11 elimination of expressive exchanges between circulators and voters during the initiative 12 process. It does not “severely burden” Plaintiffs’ First Amendment rights for the State to 13 decline to facilitate reductions in expressive exchanges.

14 Moreover, Plaintiffs’ arguments fail because the First and Fourteenth 15 Amendments do not provide positive rights—i.e., they restrict the government from 16 taking certain specified actions, but they do not affirmatively require the government to 17 assist individuals in dealing with the burdens imposed by external circumstances that the 18 government did not create. For example, political candidates cannot demand that the 19 State provide them moneys they otherwise would have fundraised but for coronavirus.
20 The political branches certainly may choose to grant relief to individuals affected—and 21 Arizona and the United States have quite properly chosen to do so in numerous instances.
22 But individuals do not generally have a constitutional right to demand such assistance in 23 addressing the burdens caused by external, non-governmental forces.

24 Plaintiffs have also failed to establish that the remaining factors favor their 25 request. Plaintiffs notably have not established that they are likely to suffer irreparable 26 harm. Moreover, the balance of equities does not favor Plaintiffs’ requested relief.

27 Finally, Plaintiffs have not established that the remedy that they seek is the 28 appropriate one. Even assuming that they otherwise are entitled to relief, other forms of

1 relief could be better tailored to their injury and they have not established that the 2 injunction sought should issue here.

3 LEGAL STANDARD

4 “A preliminary injunction is an extraordinary remedy never awarded as of right,”
5 but instead “upon a clear showing that the plaintiff is entitled to such relief.” Winter v.
6 NRDC, 555 U.S. 7, 22, 24 (2008). “[P]laintiff[s] seeking a preliminary injunction must 7 establish that [(1) they are] likely to succeed on the merits, that [(2) they are] likely to 8 suffer irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief, that [(3)] the balance of 9 equities tips in [their] favor, and that [(4)] an injunction is in the public interest.” Id. at 10 20.

11 ARGUMENT

12 I. PLAINTIFFS LACK ARTICLE III STANDING

13 Plaintiffs’ claims fail as a threshold matter because they have not established
14 Article III standing. Specifically, Plaintiffs have not established that it is “likely that a 15 favorable judicial decision will prevent or redress the [alleged] injury.” Summers, 555
16 U.S. at 493.

17 Plaintiffs here seek only to enjoin certain statutory provisions of Title 19. Mot. at 18 3. But even if those provisions are enjoined, the Arizona Constitution still would prohibit 19 use of the E-Qual system for initiative petitions. Specifically, Article IV, Part 1, Section 20 1 (9) requires that “every sheet of every such petition [i.e., initiative petitions] containing 21 signatures shall be verified by the affidavit of the person who circulated said sheet or 22 petition, setting forth that each of the names on said sheet was signed in the presence of 23 the affiant” (emphasis added). Because signatures gathered through E-Qual are not 24 signed in the presence of anyone competent to sign an affidavit—and Plaintiffs do not 25 contemplate that any such affidavit would be provided in any event—it would violate the 26 Arizona Constitution to accept them. Plaintiffs’ alleged injury thus simply will not be 27 redressed even if their proposed relief is granted. See, e.g., Nuclear Info. & Res. Serv. v.
28 Nuclear Regulatory Comm’n, 457 F.3d 941, 955 (9th Cir. 2006) (holding that Article III

1 redressability was lacking where a separate “rule would control even if the [challenged]
2 rule was wiped off the books”).¹

3 II. PLAINTIFFS’ CLAIMS LACK MERIT

4 Each of Plaintiffs’ two claims fail on the merits. Plaintiffs are thus not “likely to 5 succeed on the merits.” Winter, 555 U.S. at 20.²

6 A. The Anderson-Burdick Framework Governs Plaintiffs’ Claims

7 The Ninth Circuit has repeatedly held that all constitutional challenges to election
8 regulations are governed by “a single analytic framework”—i.e., the Anderson-Burdick
9 framework. Dudum v. Arntz, 640 F.3d 1098, 1106 n.15 (9th Cir. 2011). That includes 10 “First Amendment, Due Process, [and] Equal Protection claims.” Id. All such claims are 11 “folded into the Anderson/Burdick inquiry.” Soltysik v. Padilla, 910 F.3d 438, 449 n.7
12 (9th Cir. 2018). Plaintiffs correctly appear to acknowledge that Anderson-Burdick
13 governs both of their claims. Mot. at 11.

14 The Anderson-Burdick framework recognizes that “States may, and inevitably 15 must, enact reasonable regulations of parties, elections, and ballots to reduce election-
16 and campaign-related disorder.” Prete, 438 F.3d at 961 (quoting Timmons v. Twin Cities
17 Area New Party, 520 U.S. 351, 358 (1997)).

18 Under the Anderson-Burdick framework, “an election regulation that imposes a 19 severe burden is subject to strict scrutiny.” Nader v. Brewer, 531 F.3d 1028, 1035 (9th
20 Cir. 2008). In contrast, “Lesser burdens trigger less exacting review, and a State’s 21

22 ¹ The State anticipates that Plaintiffs will respond to this remarkable oversight by 23 challenging the Arizona Constitution as unconstitutional as well. Any such attempt 24 would be waived by being raised first in a reply brief. Zamani v. Carnes, 491 F.3d 990, 25 997 (9th Cir. 2007) (“The district court need not consider arguments raised for the first 26 time in a reply brief.”). In any event, if Plaintiffs attempt to do so, this Court should 27 provide the State with an opportunity to respond before ruling on the merits (if the Court declines to find waiver). If a provision of its Constitution is to be invalidated, the State should be given at least one opportunity to respond to Plaintiffs’ actual arguments, rather than anticipated ones.

28 ² Based on the arguments presented here, Plaintiffs’ claims should be dismissed under Rule 12. The State intends to file a timely motion to dismiss, if necessary, following this Court’s resolution of the motion for a preliminary injunction.

important regulatory interests will usually be enough to justify reasonable, nondiscriminatory restrictions.” Angle, 673 F.3d at 1132 (quoting Prete, 438 F.3d at 961) (cleaned up). Notably, “voting regulations are rarely subjected to strict scrutiny.” Dudum, 640 F.3d at 1106.

As explained below, Plaintiffs fail to establish that the Acts impose a “severe burden” on them. As such, less exacting scrutiny applies—a standard under which Plaintiffs do not even attempt to argue they can prevail.

B. The Challenged Acts Do Not Impose A “Severe Burden”

The Acts that Plaintiffs challenge, even as-applied during this pandemic, do not impose a severe burden for five reasons.

First, the epidemic is only likely to affect a small portion of the total election cycle during which Plaintiffs could collect signatures. The signature gathering period for the 2020 election cycle is about 20 months long.³ Plaintiffs’ own declarations use the Governor’s March 11 emergency declaration as the relevant starting date of consideration/impact. See Doc. 3 at 4, 5 (¶¶21, 29); Doc. 4 at 3-4 (¶¶15, 17, 22). Assuming that is the proper starting point,⁴ the pandemic has impacted only about one month of the 20-month cycle—roughly 5%. The President’s current guidelines restricting interactions presently last only until April 30—roughly another half month, or 7.5% in total. Nor do Plaintiffs provide evidence to establish the impacted period is likely to last longer than that. In Plaintiffs’ own telling, they merely do “not know if [they] will be able to resume [their] efforts by April 30.” Doc. 4 at 4-5 (¶23) (emphasis added); accord Doc. 3 at 6 (¶35).

³ See A.R.S. § 19-121(D) (“[I]n no event shall the secretary of state accept an initiative petition that was issued for circulation more than twenty-four months before the general election at which the measure is to be included on the ballot.”); see also <https://apps.arizona.vote/info/IRR/2020-general-election/18/0> (the earliest application for the current cycle was filed November 13, 2018). The signature gathering period for this cycle is thus from November 3, 2018 (2 years before the November 3, 2020 election) to the July 2, 2020 deadline for submitting initiative petitions.

⁴ Notably, the Governor did not issue any stay-at-home order until March 30. Doc. 3 at 6 (¶31).

1 Even assuming that coronavirus has completely shut down signature gathering
 2 during the March 11-April 30, 2020 window, that would only represent a single-digit
 3 percentage of the total time available to collect signatures for the 2020 election cycle
 4 (~7.5%). Furthermore, it would barely exceed 10% if the pandemic continued to shut
 5 down circulating efforts for another month after that until May 31 (i.e., ~12.5%). And 6 Plaintiffs do not submit any evidence that it will.

7 Plaintiffs do not cite any precedent for the proposition that an impact accounting
 8 for less than/around 10% total hindrance is a “severe burden.” See Prete, 438 F.3d at 967
 9 (holding there was no severe burden where “plaintiffs did not prove that [challenged law]
 10 significantly limits the available pool of people willing to circulate petitions” (emphasis 11 added)); accord id. at 953 n.5. Indeed, it stretches the meaning of “severe” past its 12 breaking point to treat it as such.

13 Notably, Plaintiff Arizonans for Fair Elections did not file an application with the 14 Secretary until October 30, 2019. Doc. 3 at 2 (¶8). In doing so, it wasted more than half
 15 of the available time in which it could have been gathering signatures. Similarly, it
 16 appears likely that Plaintiff Health Care Rising AZ did not file an application with the 17 Secretary until August 20, 2019. Doc. 4 at 2 (¶7).⁵ In doing so, it wasted over 9 of the 20 18 available months.

19 It was Plaintiffs’ choice—not the State’s—to procrastinate and dither away time
 20 that might later become critical. Plaintiffs’ delay absolutely dwarfs the time period that 21 COVID-19 is likely to affect their signature gathering efforts. Plaintiffs’ situation amply 22 demonstrates the wisdom of the advice given innumerable times by parents everywhere:
 23 “Don’t wait until the last minute.” The First and Fourteenth Amendments do not exist to 24 bail the Plaintiffs out from their lack of diligence. And while it is certainly true that this 25 pandemic is extraordinary, there are innumerable more-common contingencies (e.g., key 26

27 ⁵ The Grennan declaration attests that this was done on “August 26, 2020,” Doc. 4 at 2 28 (¶7)—a date that has not occurred—which appears to be a typographical error. Read in context of subsequent events discussed, which occurred in late 2019 (id. at 2 (¶9)) it appears likely that the actual date is August 26, 2019.

1 staff members quitting, uncommonly bad weather, unexpected cost overruns, lack of
2 public/donor interest) that could have occurred that cumulatively could have had a much
3 greater impact on their ability to gather signatures within the short window Plaintiffs 4 allotted themselves.

5 Second, and relatedly, it appears likely that Plaintiffs could have qualified for the 6 ballot had they exerted reasonable diligence. The Ninth Circuit has explained that the 7 applicable test for considering challenges to initiative regulations is similar to whether 8 “‘reasonably diligent’ candidates can normally gain a place on the ballot, or whether they 9 will rarely succeed in doing so.” Angle, 673 F.3d at 1132 (quoting Nader, 531 F.3d at 10 1035). Here, another initiative campaign (Smart and Safe Arizona)—which has filed a 11 similar suit in the Arizona Supreme Court—has attested that it was “gathered 12 approximately 300,000 signatures” so far. Makar Decl. Ex. A. That notably exceeds the 13 237,645 signatures it needs by more than 25%, and it is thus quite likely to qualify for the 14 2020 ballot. That is particularly true as even Plaintiffs appear to contemplate that they
15 will have some post-emergency time to circulate before the July 2, 2020 submission
16 deadline. Doc. 3 at 6 (¶35); Doc. 4 at 4-5 (¶23).

17 Notably, the earliest applicants for initiatives in this election cycle applied far 18 earlier on November 13, 2018.⁶ Plaintiffs have not submitted any evidence that, had they 19 been as diligent, they would still be in their current predicament.

20 Third, Plaintiffs’ evidentiary submissions fall far short of satisfying their burden
21 under Winter, or answering obvious questions they beg. Plaintiffs, for example, never 22 explain why they could not be using this time to communicate with voters—through 23 phones, emails, social media, etc.—to obtain their interest/commitment to sign, and then 24 arrange for actual execution after the pandemic has receded. Although Arizona statutory 25 and constitutional law requires in-person execution of the signatures, that hardly means
26 that Plaintiffs cannot be making productive use of this time to try to secure 27 interest/support from voters.

28

⁶ See <https://apps.arizona.vote/info/IRR/2020-general-election/18/0>.

1 Nor do any of the declarants squarely allege that they cannot proceed absent the
2 proposed relief. None of the Plaintiffs declarants appear to consider genuinely measures
3 such as using single-use signature sheets, social distancing, or scheduling petition signing
4 in advance at prepared and sanitary locations. Perhaps those measures would be 5 sufficient. Perhaps not. But Plaintiffs bear the burden of proof, and their declarations are 6 simply too thin a reed to satisfy it. Neither do they explain how any remedy other than 7 use of E-Qual would be insufficient. See infra Section IV.

8 Fourth, the Acts are viewpoint-neutral and even-handed: applying to all initiatives
9 regardless of their subject matter or position, which militates against finding a severe
10 burden. The Ninth Circuit explained in Chamness v. Bowen that because the challenged
11 regulation was “viewpoint neutral ... [that] support[ed] the conclusion that it imposes 12 only a slight burden on speech.” 722 F.3d 1110, 1118 (9th Cir. 2013). Similarly, the 13 Ninth Circuit has “repeatedly upheld as ‘not severe’ restrictions that are generally
14 applicable, even-handed, [and] politically neutral.” Dudum, 640 F.3d at 1106 (cleaned 15 up). The Acts are just that: they apply to all initiatives, regardless of the subjects they 16 address and no matter which political groups favor or oppose them, or what messages 17 they are trying to convey.

18 Fifth, it is notable that the purportedly “severe burden” on Plaintiffs’ First 19 Amendment rights is not any restriction on speech, but rather the State’s refusal to 20 sanction the elimination of expressive activity that would otherwise occur. Specifically, 21 courts have long recognized that in-person initiative circulation “of necessity involves 22 both the expression of a desire for political change and a discussion of the merits of the 23 proposed change.” Meyer v. Grant, 486 U.S. 414, 421 (1988). But Plaintiffs do not 24 argue that the State is seeking to interfere with that expressive activity; instead, they want 25 the State to eliminate any requirement that it occur, and transform signature gathering to 26 non-expressive exchanges between voters and inanimate objects (i.e., computers). But it
27 is not a “severe burden” on Plaintiffs’ First Amendment rights for the State to decline to 28

1 facilitate reductions in expressive exchanges. The First Amendment, after all, guarantees
 2 freedom of speech, not freedom from speech.

3 C. The Acts Survive “Less Exacting” Review

4 Because the Acts do not impose a severe burden, they are constitutional if they
 5 “serve[] an important regulatory interest” and are “reasonably related” to that interest.
 6 Prete, 438 F.3d at 970-71. There is no dispute that the Acts do so under ordinary times:
 7 Plaintiffs admit that “When this crisis passes, the State’s denial of access to E-Qual no
 8 longer needs to be enjoined.” Mot. at 16. Plaintiffs thus concede the existence of 9 important government interests generally.

10 In any event, “A State indisputably has a compelling interest in preserving the 11 integrity of its election process.” (citation omitted)). Purcell v. Gonzalez, 549 U.S. 1, 4
 12 (2006). To that end, the State has enacted several statutes to serve that compelling
 13 interest. See, e.g., A.R.S. § 19-112 (requiring a witness who affirms through notarized 14 affidavit); -115 (criminalizing intentionally duplicative or forged signatures); -118 15 (requiring certain circulators to register); -119.01 (criminalizing certain fraudulent acts by 16 circulators); -121.02 (disqualifying signatures, among other reasons, that don’t match the 17 signer’s voter registration file). As this Court has recognized, Plaintiffs “seek exceptions
 18 to a litany of statutory requirements aimed at ensuring that initiative-petition signatures
 19 are legitimate[.]” Doc. 61 at 5. Moreover, “The Arizona Supreme Court has stated that 20 the requirements imposed on signature gatherers, in particular, ‘represent[] a reasonable 21 means of fostering transparency ... and mitigating the threat of fraud or other wrongdoing
 22 infecting the petition process.’” Id. (quoting Stanwitz v. Reagan, 429 P.3d 1138, 1144 23 (Ariz. 2018)).

24 These comprehensive laws to prevent, detect, and prosecute fraud are largely 25 incompatible with E-Qual. In addition, use of E-Qual will eliminate handwriting samples 26 to not only compare against the voter registration file, but also to potentially identify the 27 forgers. Similarly, the absence of an in-person circulator witnessing the electronic 28 signature deprives the State of a witness to possible forgeries. In fact, under the E-Qual

1 system, a person could “sign” on behalf of many others as long as they had some minimal
 2 pedigree information and the State would have little ability to detect it.

3 Arizona also has a significant interest in promoting dialogue by requiring 4 proponents of initiatives to individually engage signers and in so doing provide 5 opportunity for meaningful discussion. Arizona thus specifically requires a circulator be 6 present when the petition is signed with a copy of the measure, facilitating active
 7 discussion. Ariz. Const. art. IV, Pt. 1, § 1(9); A.R.S. § 19-112(B). Facilitating those 8 exchanges helps to serve the State’s “undeniably ... important regulatory interest ‘in 9 making sure that an initiative has sufficient grass roots support to be placed on the 10 ballot.’” Angle, 673 F.3d at 1135 (citation omitted). Signatures that are the product of 11 expressive exchanges between citizens are more likely to ensure meaningful support than 12 a non-expressive exchange of binary bits with a computer. That is particularly true as the 13 internet is notorious for viral and ephemeral campaigns/memes/etc.

14 Finally, the State has a significant interest in safeguarding the integrity of its 15 initiative process because initiatives, once approved, are extremely difficult to amend or 16 repeal. In 1998, voters approved the Voter Protection Act (“VPA”) which amended
 17 Arizona’s constitution to require three-fourths of both houses of the Arizona Legislature
 18 to amend any voter-approved initiative. Ariz. Const. art. IV, Pt. 1, § 1(6)(C). In 2017, 19 the Arizona Legislature found the VPA “impairs the ability of the legislature ... to 20 implement changes to or corrective measures for voter-approved initiatives” making the 21 initiative process an “extraordinary power” of which the State has an interest in 22 “safeguarding the integrity and accuracy of the initiative process.” 2017 Ariz. Sess.
 23 Laws, ch. 151 § 3.

24 For all of these same reasons, the Acts would survive strict scrutiny, if it applied.

25 D. The First And Fourteenth Amendments Are Not A Source Of Positive 26 Rights

27 Plaintiffs’ claims also run afoul of the fundamental nature of the U.S. Constitution, 28 which generally provides for freedom from governmental action, not an affirmative entitlement to governmental assistance in addressing external, non-governmental forces. “[T]he Constitution is a charter of negative rather than positive liberties.... The men who wrote the Bill of Rights were not concerned that government might do too little for the people but that it might do too much to them. The Fourteenth Amendment, adopted in 1868 at the height of laissez-faire thinking, sought to protect Americans from oppression by state government, not to secure them basic governmental services.” Jackson v. City of Joliet, 715 F.2d 1200, 1203 (7th Cir. 1983).

Governments can and should assist citizens in addressing the myriad challenges posed by the coronavirus. But the First and Fourteenth Amendments do not demand that the State take any particular action to do so. Indeed, it is well-established that “a legislature’s decision not to subsidize the exercise of a fundamental right does not infringe the right[.]” Regan v. Taxation With Representation of Wash., 461 U.S. 540, 549 (1983). Notably, Regan upheld the denial of public subsidies to organizations engaged in lobbying—which unquestionably was protected activity under the First Amendment. But the federal government had no obligation to expend federal resources to subsidize that activity.

The same result should obtain here. The First and Fourteenth Amendments do not command the State to expend resources to alleviate the burdens imposed by an external force on Plaintiffs, such as by the State extending E-Qual to permit electronic execution of signatures in contravention of its own constitutional and statutory law.

E. Plaintiffs’ Case Law Is Inapposite

Plaintiffs’ brief is notable for what it does not cite: i.e., a single Ninth Circuit Anderson-Burdick case. Indeed, outside of the legal standard for a PI (Mot. at 9), Plaintiffs do not cite any Ninth Circuit authority at all. Plaintiffs have thus failed to make any argument under the standards that the Ninth Circuit has actually set forth for analyzing electoral regulations of initiatives under Anderson-Burdick, such as in Prete and Angle.

1 Plaintiffs instead rely almost exclusively on non-precedential, out-of-circuit trial
2 court cases. That reliance is misplaced.

3 Florida Democratic Party v. Scott was an October 10, 2016 order imposing a
4 single-day extension of the voter registration deadline, from October 11 to October 12,
5 2016 due to a hurricane. 215 F. Supp. 3d 1250 (N.D. Fla. 2016). While citizens have a 6 fundamental right to vote on the officials that represent them, there is no requirement that
7 the States make lawmaking-by-initiative available at all or ensure that there are measures
8 on every general election ballot. Angle, 673 F.3d at 1127. Indeed, while state
9 government can easily survive an election cycle with few or no initiatives on the ballot, it
10 will rapidly crumble if no officials are elected and elected offices are vacant. The Scott
11 reasoning is also so expansive as to be unpersuasive/impossible to apply elsewhere. The 12 Scott court remarkably held that Florida’s interests were insufficient under rational basis
13 review—which is in this context is tantamount to holding they do not exist. Id. at 1257.
14 Plaintiffs do not even attempt to argue as much here.

15 DNC v. Bostelmann, No. 20-CV-249-WMC, 2020 WL 1320819 (W.D. Wis. Mar.
16 20, 2020) was a temporary restraining order issued two days after filing of the relevant
17 complaint, and two days prior to the intervention of the defending party that later
18 successfully obtained a stay from the U.S. Supreme Court of a preliminary injunction
19 issued in that case. See RNC v. DNC, __ U.S. __, 2020 WL 1672702 (U.S. Apr. 6, 2020).
20 It too involved the right to vote on candidates, rather than qualify initiatives for a ballot,
21 thus threatening some individuals with a total deprivation of the right to vote an election,
22 rather than partial reduction in the time available to collect signatures.

23 Omari Faulkner et al. v. Virginia Dep’t of Elections, CL-2000-1456-00, *3 (Va.
24 Cir. Ct. March 25, 2020) was effectively a default judgment, where the Commonwealth
25 of Virginia declined to oppose the plaintiff, and the court consequently found it had no 26 state interests “to weigh against ‘the character and magnitude of the asserted injury to the 27 rights protected’” by the Constitution. Id.

1 There is no precedential decision that has resulted from any of these cases,
 2 although the U.S. Supreme Court stayed injunctive relief in the same Wisconsin election
 3 as Bostelmann. See RNC, 2020 WL 1672702, at *1.

4 F. Accepting Plaintiffs’ Arguments Would Have Grave Consequences

5 Accepting Plaintiffs’ arguments would also open a veritable Pandora’s Box of 6 other potential constitutional challenges. Few, if any, people’s lives have been untouched
 7 by coronavirus and virtually everyone could point to activities that have been impaired—
 8 including the exercise of constitutional rights. For example, candidates for political 9 office have a right to raise money and U.S. residents have a right to contribute money.
 10 Randall v. Sorrell, 548 U.S. 230 (2006). But coronavirus has undoubtedly interfered 11 substantially with fundraising efforts—as would be expected without the ability to hold
 12 dinners, meetings, and rallies.⁷ Undoubtedly that burden is in many cases (unlike here)
 13 severe. But that hardly means that political candidates should be able to demand that 14 governments either (1) make up the difference by directly funding their campaigns to 15 make up the shortfalls or (2) must waive or substantially expand contribution limits, so 16 that candidates can raise the money they otherwise would have collected.

17 Similarly, many political groups often rely on meeting, rallies, and pamphleteering
 18 to spread their message—which are obviously less effective now. But that hardly means 19 that they can demand that the government fund alternative speech or allocate channels of 20 governmental speech to alleviate the impacts. In many cases, they simply will have to 21 live with the inevitable diminution of their expressive capacities as an unavoidable—and 22 non-governmentally-caused—result of the pandemic.

23 In short, hardships abound in this crisis. But that does not mean that Plaintiffs 24 alone should be excused from generally applicable laws. And it is doubtful that our 25 system of government can tolerate all of the exceptions that would necessarily be 26

27 ⁷ See, e.g., Severns, Maggie and Arkin, James, Politico, ‘It can be catastrophic’:
 28 Coronavirus tanks campaign fundraising (March 20, 2020) available at <https://www.politico.com/news/2020/03/20/coronavirus-campaign-fundraising-138381>.

required if Plaintiffs’ arguments were accepted and fairly applied to all others impacted by coronavirus.

III. PLAINTIFFS HAVE NOT SATISFIED THE REMAINING REQUIREMENTS FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

A. Plaintiffs Have Not Demonstrated That They Are Likely To Suffer Irreparable Harm

Plaintiffs’ submissions also fail to establish that they are “likely to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief.” Winter, 555 U.S. at 20 (emphasis added). Plaintiff Healthcare Rising AZ notably already has 273,786 signatures—i.e., 36,141 more signatures than the required number. Doc. 4 at 3-4 (¶¶ 10, 17). It thus likely will qualify for the ballot with post-crisis circulation and reasonable diligence. Indeed, it may already have a sufficient number of valid signatures. And it tellingly offers no details to support their entirely conclusory statement that “it is unreasonable to expect the Committee to meet the statutory signature requirement by July 2, 2020.” Id. at 5 (¶24).

In contrast, Plaintiff Arizonans for Fair Elections has collected far fewer signatures: only 110,333 as March 11, 2020—only about 40% of the number assuming 100% were valid. Doc. 3 at 5 (¶29). Given this paltry pre-pandemic showing, there is thus strong reason to doubt that it would have collected the requisite number absent this emergency. It thus has not likely suffered irreparable harm caused by the challenged Acts, rather than by its own inadequate progress. Indeed, the committee tellingly does not even allege either that (1) it was likely to qualify for the ballot absent the pandemic or (2) it is likely to qualify even if the requested injunction issues.

As to Plaintiff Turk, she only alleges that she “would like to sign petitions [she is] in favor of in order to bring these initiatives to the ballot, and provide the people of Arizona with an opportunity to voice their vote.” Doc. 5 at 2 (¶10). But she notably does not allege that she will not have an opportunity to do so before the applicable July deadline. The mere delay in her ability to sign petitions—rather than any actual outright

1 denial for the 2020 election cycle—does not constitute irreparable harm. Cf. Weinberger
 2 v. Romero-Barcelo, 456 U.S. 305, 311 (1982).

3 Because Plaintiffs have not established that they are likely to suffer irreparable
 4 harm, their motion should be denied on that basis alone.

5 B. The Balance Of Equities Disfavors Plaintiffs’ Request

6 The balance of equities also tips against issuance of a preliminary injunction. “[A] 7 state suffers irreparable injury whenever an enactment of its people or their 8 representatives is enjoined.” Coalition for Econ. Equity v. Wilson, 122 F.3d 718, 719
 9 (9th Cir. 1997); accord Maryland v. King, 133 S. Ct. 1, 3 (2012) (Roberts, C.J., in 10 chambers) (same). These harms outweigh Plaintiffs’ speculative, skeletal and unlikely
 11 harms. See supra at 14-15.

12 Moreover, “Court orders affecting elections, especially conflicting orders, can 13 themselves result in voter confusion and consequent incentive to remain away from the 14 polls.” Purcell, 549 U.S. at 4-5. The July 2 deadline for submitting petitions with 15 signatures is now rapidly approaching. And any order granting a preliminary injunction 16 could potentially be appealed and reversed—causing further electoral chaos.

17 For these reasons, the U.S. Supreme Court recently stayed a coronavirus-based 18 injunction permitting additional time to mail in ballots—which could result in voters
 19 outright losing an opportunity to vote. See RNC, 2020 WL 1672702, at *1. Here, 20 however, Plaintiffs will lose at most a small portion of the 20 months available to them to 21 collect signatures. The equities thus militate even more against a preliminary injunction
 22 here than they did in RNC v. DNC.

23 Plaintiffs’ request should further be rejected because it seeks mandatory relief—
 24 i.e., compelling the Secretary to enable use of the E-Qual system. Mandatory injunctions 25 like this one “‘go[] well beyond simply maintaining the status quo pendente lite [and]
 26 [are] particularly disfavored.’” Stanley v. USC, 13 F.3d 1313, 1320 (9th Cir. 1994)
 27 (citation omitted). Plaintiffs seeking this “disfavored” remedy must meet a heightened 28 burden; indeed, district courts must “deny such relief, ‘unless the facts and law clearly

1 favor the moving party.’’ Id. (emphasis added) (citation omitted)); accord Anderson v.
 2 United States, 612 F.2d 1112, 1115 (9th Cir. 1979). Plaintiffs have made no such legal or 3 factual showing.

4 IV. PLAINTIFFS’ REQUESTED RELIEF IS UNWARRANTED

5 Even if Plaintiffs had established their entitlement to some relief—including a 6 likely violation of the U.S. Constitution—their requested injunction is ill-explained and 7 inequitable. Plaintiffs have not, for example, explained why a pro rata reduction of the 8 signature requirement would not be a more appropriate remedy than use of the E-Qual
 9 system. (For example, if coronavirus renders signature gathering half as effective for two 10 months, a 5 (0.5 * 2 months / 20 months) pro rata reduction could be ordered.) Similarly,
 11 Plaintiffs have not explained why a relaxation of the in-person execution requirement—
 12 e.g., to permit “virtual presence” through live audio/video transmission—would not 13 remedy their harm more precisely (and in a more narrowly tailored manner). See, e.g., 14 Orantes-Hernandez v. Thornburgh, 919 F.2d 549, 558 (9th Cir. 1990) (Injunctions “must 15 be narrowly tailored to give only the relief to which plaintiffs are entitled.”). Nor have 16 Plaintiffs explained why an injunction simply permitting them to apply signatures they 17 have collected for qualifying for the 2022 election would not be sufficient. (That 18 obviously would be a delay, but delays abound to millions of Americans for a myriad of 19 tasks they otherwise could accomplish earlier absent this pandemic.) Such issues should 20 be resolved before any injunction issues.

21 CONCLUSION

22 Plaintiffs’ request for a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction
 23 should be denied.

1 Respectfully submitted this 10th day of April, 2020.

2
3 MARK BRNOVICH
4 ATTORNEY GENERAL

5 By: s/ Drew C. Ensign
6 Drew C. Ensign (No. 25463)
7 Deputy Solicitor General
8 Robert J. Makar (No. 33579)
9 Jennifer J. Wright (No. 27145)
10 Assistant Attorneys General

11 Attorneys for Intervenor-
12 Defendant State of Arizona
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I hereby certify that on this 10th day of April, 2020, I caused the foregoing document to be electronically transmitted to the Clerk's Office using the CM/ECF System for Filing, which will send notice of such filing to all registered CM/ECF users.

s/ Drew C. Ensign

Drew C. Ensign

*Attorneys for Intervenor-
Defendant State of Arizona*