

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

TONY N., KAREN M., JACK S.,
HEGHINE MURADYAN, and DAYANA
VERA DE APONTE, Individually and on Behalf of All Others Similarly Situated,

Plaintiffs,

v.

U.S. CITIZENSHIP & IMMIGRATION
SERVICES, et al.,

Defendants.

Case No. 21-cv-08742-MMC

ORDER DENYING PLAINTIFFS'
MOTIONS FOR PRELIMINARY
INJUNCTION AND FOR CLASS
CERTIFICATION

Before the Court are two motions: (1) plaintiffs' "Motion for Preliminary Injunction and Provisional Class Certification," filed November 11, 2021; and (2) plaintiffs' "Motion for Class Certification," filed November 11, 2021. The matters came on regularly for hearing December 17, 2021. Emma Winger and Katherine Melloy Goettel of the American Immigration Council and Zachary Manfredi of the Asylum Seeker Advocacy Project appeared on behalf of plaintiffs. Kevin Hirst and Sergio Sarkany of the United States Department of Justice appeared on behalf of defendants. Having read and considered the parties' respective written submissions, and having considered the parties' respective oral arguments, the Court rules as follows.

BACKGROUND

On November 10, 2021, plaintiffs, five individuals who have applied for asylum, filed their Complaint in the above-titled action, in which they allege the following events have occurred. Each plaintiff has received an Employment Authorization Document ("EAD") from United States Citizenship & Immigration Services ("USCIS"), allowing such

1 plaintiff, during the pendency of his/her asylum application, to work for a period of two 2 years, and has applied for renewal of his/her EAD before the expiration date. As 3 discussed in greater detail below, each plaintiff has received from USCIS a 180-day
 4 extension of the expiration date of his/her EAD, and, as of November 10, 2021, the date 5 on which plaintiffs filed the above-titled action, none of the plaintiffs' respective 6 applications for renewal had been granted, with four of the five plaintiffs' 180-day
 7 extension periods having expired before the instant action was filed and the remaining 8 plaintiff's 180-day extension expiring shortly after such filing. Plaintiffs further allege they 9 "will suffer or have suffered irreparable harm" from the failure to adjudicate their 10 respective applications for renewal. (See Compl. at 23:18.)

11 Based on the above allegations, plaintiffs, on their own behalf and on behalf of a 12 putative class, assert two causes of action. In Count One, plaintiffs seek relief under the 13 Mandamus Act, 28 U.S.C. § 1361, under a theory that USCIS has a "ministerial, 14 nondiscretionary duty to adjudicate the applications of asylum applicants to renew their 15 EADs within the 180-day automatic extension period." (See Compl. ¶ 116.) In Count
 16 Two, plaintiffs seek relief under the Administrative Procedure Act, 5 U.S.C. §§ 701-06,
 17 under a theory that USCIS's "failure to adjudicate the petitions" within the 180-day
 18 extension period "constitutes an unreasonable delay." (See Compl. ¶ 123.) As to both 19 causes of action, plaintiffs seek a declaration that USCIS's "delayed adjudication of 20 [p]laintiffs' and class members' applications to renew their EADs [is] unreasonable" and 21 an order compelling USCIS to "adjudicate [p]laintiffs' and class members' applications to 22 renew their EADs within the 180-day automatic extension period." (See Compl., Request
 23 for Relief ¶¶ 4, 5.)

24 DISCUSSION

25 As noted, plaintiffs have applied for asylum and seek permission to continue to 26 work during the pendency of their asylum applications.

27 A. Applicable Regulations

28 Pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 1158, "[a]n applicant for asylum is not entitled to

1 employment authorization, but such authorization may be provided under regulation by 2 the Attorney General." See 8 U.S.C. § 1158(d)(2).

3 The Department of Homeland Security has promulgated regulations addressing 4 the circumstances under which aliens applying for asylum may seek employment
5 authorization. In particular, although "an applicant for asylum who is in the United States
6 may apply for employment authorization," see 8 C.F.R. § 208.7(a)(1)(i), such applicant 7 "cannot apply for initial employment authorization earlier than 365 calendar days after the 8 date USCIS or the immigration court receives the asylum application," see 8 C.F.R.
9 § 208.7(a)(1)(ii). Following the expiration of the 365-day period, such applicant "must 10 request employment authorization on the form and in the manner prescribed by USCIS
11 and according to the form instructions, and must submit biometrics at a scheduled 12 biometrics services appointment," see 8 C.F.R. § 208.7(a)(1)(i), after which "USCIS may 13 grant initial employment authorization . . . for a period that USCIS determines is 14 appropriate at its discretion, not to exceed increments of two years," see id.

15 USCIS may also "renew employment authorization . . . in increments determined 16 by USCIS in its discretion, but not to exceed increments of two years." See 8 C.F.R.
17 § 208.7(b)(1). An applicant for renewal "must request employment authorization on the 18 form and in the manner prescribed by USCIS and according to the form instructions" and 19 must "establish that he or she has continued to pursue an asylum application before 20 USCIS, an immigration judge, or the Board of Immigration Appeals," as well as "that he 21 or she continues to meet the eligibility criteria for employment authorization." See id.

22 "[T]he validity period of an expiring [EAD] . . . will be automatically extended for an 23 additional period not to exceed 180 days from the date of such document's and such 24 employment authorization's expiration," provided that the request for renewal is "properly
25 filed . . . before the expiration date," is "[b]ased on the same employment authorization
26 category as shown on the face of the expiring [EAD]," and is "[b]ased on a class of aliens 27 whose eligibility to apply for employment authorization continues notwithstanding 28 expiration of the [EAD] and is based on an employment authorization category that does not require adjudication of an underlying application or petition before adjudication of the renewal application." See 8 C.F.R. § 274a.13(d)(1).

B. Plaintiffs' Motions

As noted, plaintiffs seek a preliminary injunction and an order certifying a class.

1. Preliminary Injunction

"A plaintiff seeking a preliminary injunction must establish [1] that he is likely to succeed on the merits, [2] that he is likely to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief, [3] that the balance of equities tips in his favor, and [4] that an injunction is in the public interest." Winter v. Natural Resources Defense Council, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 24 (2008).

Here, plaintiffs seek issuance of a preliminary injunction requiring USCIS to adjudicate renewal applications within the above-referenced 180-day extension period, and, with regard to applicants whose 180-day extension periods have expired, to adjudicate the applications within fourteen days of issuance of an order granting the preliminary injunction.

At the outset, the Court notes that the renewal applications of three of the five named plaintiffs, specifically, Tony N., Jack S., and Heghine Muradyan, were adjudicated prior to the December 17, 2021, hearing. (See Nolan Decl., filed December 6, 2021, ¶ 25(a), ¶ 25(d); Pls.' Reply in Support of Mot. for Prelim. Inj., filed December 10, 2021, at 3:25-26.) Accordingly, to the extent the motion for preliminary injunction is brought on behalf of those three plaintiffs, the motion will be denied as moot, in that they have obtained the relief sought, see Ray v. Cuccinelli, 2020 WL 6462398, at *4 (N.D. Cal. November 3, 2020) (finding motion for preliminary injunction seeking extension of EAD was "moot" as to plaintiffs "whose work authorizations [had] been adjudicated"), and, given that their newly-issued EADs will remain valid for a period of thirty months, have not shown their claims qualify for the "capable of repetition, yet evading review" exception to mootness, see Biodiversity Legal Foundation v. Badgley, 309 F.3d 1166, 1173 (9th Cir. 2022) (requiring showing, inter alia, "there is a reasonable expectation that the plaintiffs will be subjected to [the challenged conduct] again") (internal quotation and citation omitted).

The renewal applications of plaintiffs Karen M. and Dayana Vera de Aponte, however, remain pending. Accordingly, the Court next turns to the merits of the motion for a preliminary injunction, as brought on their behalf, and, in particular, whether plaintiffs have made the requisite showing as to the above-listed four elements.

a. Likelihood of Success on the Merits

As plaintiffs seek an order compelling USCIS to adjudicate their renewal applications within 180 days, i.e., a specified time period not otherwise required by a statute or regulation,¹ such proposed injunctive relief is mandatory in nature, see Marlyn Nutraceuticals Inc. v. Mucos Pharma GmbH & Co., 571 F.3d 873, 879 (9th Cir. 2009) (holding "[a] mandatory injunction orders a responsible party to take action"; internal quotation and citation omitted), and, consequently, plaintiffs must show a "clear likelihood of success on the merits," see Stanley v. University of Southern California, 13 F.3d 1313, 1316 (9th Cir. 1994).

In that regard, the parties agree that the factors identified in Telecommunications Research & Action Center v. FCC, 750 F.2d 70 (D.C. Cir. 1984) (hereinafter, "TRAC"), govern, where, as here, a plaintiff seeks relief based on an allegation that the government has unreasonably delayed issuing a decision. See id. at 79-80 (identifying factors to be considered in determining "claims of unreasonable agency delay"); Biodiversity Legal Foundation, 309 F.3d at 1177 n.11 (holding TRAC factors are to be considered where plaintiff alleges unreasonable delay on part of government and there is "an absence of a firm deadline").

As set forth in TRAC, those factors are as follows: "(1) the time agencies take to make decisions must be governed by a rule of reason; (2) where Congress has provided a timetable or other indication of the speed with which it expects the agency to proceed in the enabling statute, that statutory scheme may supply content for this rule of reason; (3) delays that might be reasonable in the sphere of economic regulation are less tolerable when human health and welfare are at stake; (4) the court should consider the effect of expediting delayed action on agency activities of a higher or competing priority; (5) the court should also take into account the nature and extent of the interests prejudiced by delay; and (6) the court need not find any impropriety lurking behind agency lassitude in order to hold that agency action is unreasonably delayed." See TRAC, 750 F.2d at 80 (internal quotations and citations omitted).

¹ At the hearing, plaintiffs acknowledged that no statute or regulation requires USCIS to rule on a renewal application within a particular timeframe.

(1) First Factor: Rule of Reason

Under the first TRAC factor, the "rule of reason," courts "consider whether the time for agency action has been reasonable," see In re Natural Resources Defense Council, Inc., 956 F.3d 1134, 1139 (9th Cir. 2020), taking into account the "length of the delay" and the "reasons for delay," see Poursohi v. Blinken, 2021 WL 5331446, at *5-6 (N.D. Cal. November 16, 2021)

Here, as to both Karen M. and Dayana Vera de Aponte, the period of delay is relatively short, specifically, slightly over one month. Plaintiffs argue, however, that it is reasonable to require USCIS to rule on a renewal application within the 180-day extension period, and that any delay beyond that period is unreasonable.

In support thereof, plaintiffs rely on the Department of Homeland Security's ("DHS") November 2016 amendment of 8 C.F.R. § 274a.13, by which amendment it eliminated a requirement that USCIS rule on EAD applications within ninety days of receipt and added the above-described provision that applicants for renewals would be given a 180-day extension of their EADs. See 81 Fed. Reg. 82398, 82401. Additionally, plaintiffs rely on the DHS's June 2020 amendment of 8 C.F.R. § 208.7, by which amendment it removed a requirement that renewal applications be submitted at least ninety days prior to the expiration date, see 85 Fed. Reg. 37509, and stated the 180-day extension "serve[d] the same purpose" as the provision it was removing, namely, to 1 "prevent[] gaps in work authorization," see id.

2 There appears to be no dispute that USCIS was able to adjudicate renewal
3 applications within the 180-day extension period through almost all of the remaining
4 months of 2020, until, in December 2020, the alleged delays began. (See Compl. ¶ 57
5 (alleging, "beginning in December 2020, [d]efendant USCIS began to take more than 180
6 days to adjudicate EAD renewals for many asylum applications").) Even in June 2020, 7 however, the month in which renewal applicants were relieved of their prior obligation to 8 file their renewal applications at least ninety days before the date of expiration, USCIS 9 pointed out it was "advisable to submit the application earlier . . . to account for current 10 Form I-765 processing times," see 85 Fed. Reg. at 37509,² and acknowledged that 11 "cases may occasionally pend longer than 180 days due to unusual facts or 12 circumstances," see id. at 37524.³

13 The usual process by which USCIS reviews renewal EAD applications is as 14 follows. When renewal applicants submit their applications, the applications are "initially 15 processed at a USCIS Lockbox facility," where employees review them⁴ and "transmit
16 accepted filings for processing and adjudication in USCIS's Electronic Immigration
17 System," i.e., the "case management system" used by USCIS. (See Nolan Decl. ¶ 12.)
18 Next, the USCIS case management system assigns each renewal application to a 19 "specific service center based on the state of residence provided by the applicant and 20 then parses it into a series of tasks, starting with pre-processing tasks" (see id. ¶ 14), 21

22 ² Form I-765, titled Application for Employment Authorization, is the form used by 23 aliens who seek an initial EAD, as well as by aliens who seek to renew an EAD.

24 ³ Although plaintiffs allege applicants relied on the June 2020 amendment and 25 delayed filing a renewal application (see Compl. ¶ 54), neither Karen M. nor Dayana Vera de Aponte state she delayed filing her renewal application in light of the June 2020 amendment.

26 ⁴ In connection with such review, the employees "sort mail, scan application
27 packages, enter data into systems, accept or reject filings based on applicable business 28 rules, facilitate the collection and deposit of fees, return rejected filings, [and] forward original photos submitted with the application package to the appropriate office." (See Nolan Decl. ¶ 12.)

1 some of which tasks are completed electronically while others, in particular, those 2 containing a discrepancy, require manual review, involving a variety of "pre-processing
 3 tasks," such as "identifying alternate names and/or date(s) of birth for background
 4 checks" (see id. ¶ 16). Once the pre-processing tasks have been completed, the 5 application is placed in the service center's "'case review' work queue," at which point the 6 application is ready to be "adjudicated by an officer." (See id.) The officers adjudicate 7 the applications in the queue "based on date of filing"; specifically, the officers "determine 8 if all eligibility criteria are met" and "make a decision, such as grant or deny, or issue a 9 request for initial or additional evidence." (See id. ¶ 14.)

10 Although, at the hearing, plaintiffs observed that USCIS has publicly stated it takes 11 approximately twelve minutes for a USCIS officer to make a determination on the merits 12 of an EAD application, the statement on which plaintiffs rely was made by USCIS in 13 November 2019, see 84 Fed. Reg. 62280, 62292, prior to the circumstances, discussed 14 below, giving rise to the adjudicatory delays that began at the end of 2020 (see, e.g., 15 Nolan Decl. ¶ 23), and, even when made, did "not reflect the total processing time
 16 applicants . . . can expect to wait for a decision," see 84 Fed. Reg. at 62291.

17 In their response to the instant motion, defendants have explained that unforeseen
 18 circumstances have arisen within the last year, with the result that USCIS's normal 19 procedures have been significantly disrupted. In particular, beginning in March 2020, as 20 a result of the COVID-19 pandemic, applicants were unable to obtain biometrics 21 appointments due to the closure of Application Support Centers, where biometrics are 22 taken, causing a "build-up of adjudicative backlogs" (see Nolan Decl. ¶ 18), and,
 23 additionally, there was a drop in "receipts and incoming fees," causing staffing shortages
 24 and ultimately the need to train new employees, who could not be hired until April 2021
 25 (see id. ¶ 19). Further, there were delays caused by a "dramatic spike" in the number of 26 EAD applications by asylum seekers in the Spring of 2021 (see id. ¶ 21), coupled with 27 USCIS's need to "re-organize and reprioritize resources to favor [EAD] applications 28 impacted by litigation" filed on behalf of categories of applicants other than asylum

1 seekers (see id. ¶ 20) and by an injunction that relieved some asylum seekers,
 2 specifically, "members of CASA [CASA de Maryland] and ASAP [Asylum Seeker
 3 Advocacy Project]," from the biometrics appointment requirement (see id. ¶ 23).⁵

4 In sum, although defendants' showing may not be enough to deny relief where a 5 delay beyond the expiration of the 180-extension period is of a more significant length, in 6 this instance, where the period of time in which Karen M. and Dayana Vera de Aponte
 7 have been waiting is just over one month, the Court finds the first factor weighs against 8 granting a preliminary injunction.

9 (2) Second Factor: Congressional Timetable

10 No statute or other congressional declaration sets forth "a timetable or other 11 indication of the speed," see TRAC, 750 F.2d at 80, by which USCIS expects applications
 12 seeking renewal of EADs to be adjudicated. Although plaintiffs rely on 8 U.S.C. § 1571, 13 which states "the processing of an immigration benefit application should be completed 14 not later than 180 days after the initial filing," see 8 U.S.C. § 1571(b), that statute is 15 essentially "precatory" rather than mandatory in nature, see, e.g., Poursohi, 2021 WL
 16 5331446, at *5-6. Moreover, § 1571 does not include applications for EADs, which are 17 not "immigration benefit[s]," see 8 U.S.C. § 1572(2); 8 U.S.C. § 1571(b) (providing 18 "nonimmigrant visa" as example of "immigration benefit"); see also 8 U.S.C. § 1158(d)(2) 19 (providing "applicant for asylum is not entitled to employment authorization"), and, in any 20 event, where § 1571 has been held applicable, courts have found delays of several years
 21 are not unreasonable, see, e.g., Poursohi, 2021 WL 5331446, at 5 (finding eighteen-22 month delay in adjudicating immigrant visa "does not by itself indicate an unreasonable 23

24 ⁵ At the hearing, counsel for plaintiffs stated Karen M. and Dayana Vera de Aponte
 25 are members of ASAP, suggesting they were not impacted by delays other applicants
 26 may have experienced in endeavoring to obtain biometrics appointments. The briefing
 27 submitted by the parties, however, includes no evidence that either Karen M. or Dayana 28 Vera de Aponte is an ASAP member, and, even accepting counsel's representation as an accurate description of their membership status, there is no showing USCIS was made aware of that fact other than through the additional process in which USCIS officers now must engage to identify such applicants, which process itself adds to the time by which officers ordinarily would arrive at a final decision. (See id.)

1 delay"; citing cases finding "lengthier delays not to be unreasonable").

2 Accordingly, the Court finds the second factor weighs against granting a
3 preliminary injunction.

4 (3) Third and Fifth Factors: Interest of Plaintiffs

5 The parties discuss the third and fifth factors together, as will the Court. See 6 Independence Mining Co. v. Babbitt, 105 F.3d 502, 509 (9th Cir. 1997) (referring to third 7 and fifth TRAC factors as "overlapping").

8 As noted, greater weight is afforded where the resulting harm is to health and 9 welfare rather than to financial circumstances. Here, the harm identified by both Karen 10 M. and Dayana Vera de Aponte is, at present, primarily economic loss. Each, however, 11 has identified other harm that may occur if the period of delay were to extend in a 12 significant manner. (See Karen M. Decl. ¶ 7 (citing possible inability to obtain disability
13 leave); Vera de Aponte Decl. ¶¶ 11-12 (citing possible loss of Medicaid provider number 14 necessary for work); id. ¶ 14 (citing possible loss of health insurance).)

15 Accordingly, the Court finds the third and fifth factors weigh in favor of granting a 16 preliminary injunction.

17 (4) Fourth Factor: Effect of Expediting Action on Agency

18 As noted, plaintiffs seek an order requiring USCIS to adjudicate their renewal 19 applications with fourteen days of the issuance of an order granting a preliminary 20 injunction.

21 As the D.C. Circuit has recognized, relief under the TRAC factors is inappropriate 22 where, despite other TRAC factors weighing in favor of relief, "a judicial order putting the 23 petitioner at the head of the queue would simply move all others back one space and 24 produce no net gain." See Mashpee Wampanoag Tribal Council, Inc. v. Norton, 336 F.3d 25 1094, 1100 (D.C. Cir. 2003). Although plaintiffs here attempt to avoid this concern by 26 noting they seek injunctive relief on behalf of a class, even assuming class certification, 27 the relief requested would move one category of aliens, namely, asylum seekers who 28 have received a 180-day extension, over all other categories of aliens who have applied

1 for EADs.

2 Accordingly, the Court finds the fourth factor weighs against granting a preliminary
3 injunction.

4 (5) Sixth Factor: Impropriety/Bad Faith

5 In the instant case, in contrast to cases in which the sixth factor has been found to 6 favor injunctive relief, see, e.g., Brower v. Evans, 257 F.3d 1058, 1069 (9th Cir. 2001)
7 (affirming district court's finding agency "unreasonably delayed" decision where agency
8 failed to provide "valid excuse" for failure to act and "argue[d] unconvincingly" any delay
9 was result of third-party's failure to cooperate, when, in fact, record established third-10 party's "enthusiasm and willingness to cooperate"), plaintiffs make no showing of 11 intentional delay, or even that any delay is the result of negligence on the part of USCIS.
12 Indeed, given the reasons for delay identified by USCIS, any delay appears to be outside 13 of its control.

14 Accordingly, the Court finds the sixth factor either weighs against granting a 15 preliminary injunction or, alternatively, is neutral.

16 (6) Summary of TRAC Factors

17 On the present record, as set forth above, the first, and "most important," factor, 18 see In re A Community Voice, 878 F.3d 779, 786 (9th Cir. 2017), as well as the second 19 and fourth factors, weigh against granting a preliminary injunction, the third and fifth 20 factors together weigh in favor of granting a preliminary injunction, and the sixth factor 21 either weighs against granting a preliminary injunction or is neutral.

22 Under such circumstances, the Court finds plaintiffs have failed to show a clear 23 likelihood of success on the merits.

24 b. Remaining Preliminary Injunction Elements

25 In light of the above finding, the Court does not address herein the remaining 26 elements bearing on entitlement to a preliminary injunction. See Garcia v. Google, Inc., 27 786 F.3d 733, 740 (9th Cir. 2015) (holding where plaintiff has not shown likelihood of 28 success on merits, court "need not consider the remaining three Winter elements")

(internal quotation, alteration, and citation omitted).

c. Conclusion: Motion for Preliminary Injunction

For the reasons set forth above, plaintiffs' motion for a preliminary injunction will be denied.

2. Class Certification

Plaintiffs seek to certify a class under Rule 23 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

Pursuant to Rule 23, members of a class may sue "as representative parties on behalf of all members only if: (1) the class is so numerous that joinder of all members is impracticable; (2) there are questions of law or fact common to the class; (3) the claims or defenses of the representative parties are typical of the claims or defenses of the class; and (4) the representative parties will fairly and adequately protect the interests of the class." See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a). Additionally, where the above prerequisites are satisfied, a class action may be maintained only if a sufficient showing is made under Rule 23(b).

Here, plaintiffs rely on Rule 23(b)(2), which requires a showing that "the party opposing the class has acted or refused to act on grounds that apply generally to the class, so that final injunctive relief or corresponding declaratory relief is appropriate respecting the class as a whole." See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(2). "Rule 23(b)(2) applies only when a single injunction or declaratory judgment would provide relief to each member of the class." Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Dukes, 564 U.S. 338, 360 (2011). Stated otherwise, "the relief sought must perforce affect the entire class at once." See id. at 361-62.

In the instant case, the Court, to determine the merits of plaintiffs' claims, as well as those of putative class members, must, as discussed above, balance the TRAC factors. Of those factors, the third and fifth factors, namely, harm and prejudice, are subject to determination on an individual basis, and the first factor is, in part, namely, the length of delay, likewise subject to determination on such basis. Although, in cases

1 where the other TRAC factors all weigh in favor of the relief requested, a showing of any 2 amount of harm, prejudice, or delay might warrant issuance of an injunction applicable to 3 the entire class, see, e.g., Santillan v. Gonzales, 388 F. Supp. 2d 1065, 1083-84 (N.D.
4 Cal. 2005) (finding lawful permanent residents awaiting written documentation of their 5 status entitled to classwide relief, where all class members experienced some harm from 6 inability to work and all other TRAC factors weighed in favor of granting relief), here, as 7 discussed above, such showing has not been made. Consequently, an individual 8 evaluation would be necessary in order to determine if a class member is entitled to 9 injunctive relief.

10 Accordingly, plaintiffs' motion for class certification will be denied.

11 CONCLUSION

12 For the reasons stated, plaintiffs' Motion for Preliminary Injunction and Motion for 13 Class Certification are hereby DENIED.

14 IT IS SO ORDERED.

15
16 Dated: December 22, 2021

17
18 MAXINE M. CHESNEY
19 United States District Judge
20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28