Wright & Miller, FEDERAL PRACTICE & PROCEDURE, Civil 2d § 1357 (1990)	4

1 Plaintiffs, Olivia Mendoza and Juana Mendiola, individually and on behalf of all 2 others similarly situated, (hereafter "plaintiffs"), submit the following brief in 3 opposition to defendants' Motion to Dismiss and For A Stay of Discovery ("the 4 Motion").¹

5 I. INTRODUCTION

6 Plaintiffs have brought this proposed class action in order to compensate the 7 victims of defendants' long-standing practice of employing work forces of illegal 8 immigrant laborers at their apple growing and fruit packing facilities. These victims, 9 employees of Matson Fruit Company ("Matson") and Zirkle Fruit Co. ("Zirkle") who are 10 legally authorized to work in the U.S., are paid depressed wage rates because the two 11 companies knowingly employ large numbers of illegal immigrants in order to bring 12 down wages for all employees. The Complaint alleges this practice ("the illegal 13 immigrant hiring scheme") violates the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt 14 Organizations Act (RICO), 18 U.S.C. § 1961 et seq., which was amended in 1996 to 15 prohibit precisely this type of activity.² The Complaint further alleges a civil 16 conspiracy claim under Washington common law in that Matson and Zirkle have 17 conspired with defendant Selective Employment Agency, Inc. (Selective) to violate the 18 Immigration and Nationality Act, and this conspiracy has caused the plaintiffs to 19 suffer damages in the form of depressed wages.

21
22 ¹ All three defendants have joined in the Motion. However, plaintiffs' RICO 23 claims are brought only against Matson and Zirkle, and not against Selective 24 Employment Agency.

25 ² On April 24, 1996, as part of Pub. L. 104-132 § 433, Congress amended RICO to 26 make 8 U.S.C. § 1324(a)(3)(A) and related violations predicate offenses.

1 The defendants make several arguments in support of their contention that the 2 complaint is worthy of dismissal pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) for failure to state
3 a cause of action. However, as none of these arguments is supported by any applicable 4 authority, defendants' motion should be denied in its entirety.

5 First, the defendants claim that plaintiffs fail to adequately allege any predicate 6 act under RICO. In support of this argument, the defendants argue that it is not 7 enough for plaintiffs to allege that the defendants have knowingly employed and 8 harbored more than the requisite number of illegal aliens to constitute the predicate 9 act as set out in 8 U.S.C. § 1324(a)(3)(A). Rather, say the defendants, plaintiffs are 10 required to name each and every unauthorized employee, and inform the Court as to 11 where, when and how each alien entered the country. The defendants simply ignore 12 that Rule 8 of the Fed. R. Civ. P. calls for notice pleading, and not the prolix they 13 demand. Because courts are clear that Rule 8 applies to non-fraud RICO predicate 14 acts, the defendants' argument cannot prevail. As for the allegations of mail fraud (in 15 mailing false I-9 forms to the INS), the defendants are correct that the heightened 16 standards of Rule 9 apply. Nonetheless, the Ninth Circuit has squarely held that 17 allegations similar to those made by the plaintiffs are sufficient to satisfy Rule 9 18 where, as here, the detailed evidence of the fraud is in the exclusive possession and 19 control of the corporate defendants.³

20 Second, the defendants claim that the plaintiffs lack standing to sue under RICO 21 because they have failed to allege a "direct" injury as required by the United States 22 Supreme Court in Holmes.⁴ As the defendants ignore, however, the rule of Holmes only

24 ³ As the plaintiffs also demonstrate, the I-9 forms themselves are fully 25 discoverable.

26 ⁴ Holmes v. Securities Investor Protection Corp., 503 U.S. 258 (1992).

1 applies where the plaintiffs are indirect victims of a harm directly inflicted upon other 2 parties. In such circumstances, where the plaintiffs' harm is wholly derivative of harm 3 inflicted on others, the plaintiffs are said to be too "remote," and their harm too 4 "indirect." In stark contrast, the plaintiffs here are the sole and direct victims of the 5 defendants' successful effort to drive down wages through the illegal hiring scheme.
6 Accordingly, Holmes cannot bar plaintiffs' suit here.

7 Third, the defendants assert that the plaintiffs' RICO claims are somehow 8 preempted by the "comprehensive enforcement scheme" established by the 9 Immigration Reform and Control Act ("IRCA.") This argument ignores the fact that, in 10 making violations of immigration law RICO predicates, Congress explicitly authorized 11 private civil actions for monetary damages such as that brought by plaintiffs here.
12 Moreover, there is simply no conflict between the IRCA (which imposes certain 13 requirements on employers) and plaintiffs' suit under RICO (which seeks to 14 compensate the victims of the defendants' violations of immigration law).

15 Fourth, while the defendants concede that the plaintiffs have stated a claim for 16 civil conspiracy under Washington State common law, they argue that the claim is 17 preempted by the IRCA. However, the express preemption clause of the IRCA (which 18 defines the full preemptive scope of the IRCA) preempts only criminal and civil laws 19 that impose "sanctions," and says nothing about common law actions for damages. On 20 its face, then, the IRCA does not preempt the plaintiffs' claim, and the defendants' 21 motion should be denied.

22 Finally, in an effort to stall plaintiffs' progress in this case, the defendants have 23 filed a separate motion to stay discovery. Incredibly, while courts require a strong 24 showing of burden and/or extreme likelihood of success on the merits of a dispositive 25 motion, the defendants proffer no showing whatsoever. Instead, defendants suggest 26

1 that "privacy concerns" with respect to some information the plaintiffs may seek to 2 discover justifies a total stay of discovery. Plaintiffs respectfully submit that any real 3 privacy concerns can be addressed through a protective order, and that defendants 4 have provided no basis for the relief they seek.

5 II. THE DEFENDANTS CANNOT MEET THEIR 6 HEAVY BURDEN UNDER RULE 12(B)(6)

7 In moving to dismiss for failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6), defendants 8 bear a heavy burden. Such a motion can only be granted when the defendants 9 establish "beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of his 10 claim which would entitle him to relief." Terracom v. Valley Nat'l Bank, 49 F.3d 555, 11 558 (9th Cir. 1995). "It is axiomatic that 'the motion to dismiss for failure to state a 12 claim is viewed with disfavor and is rarely granted.'" Gilligan v. Jamco Development 13 Corp., 108 F.3d 246, 249 (9th Cir. 1997). See also Wright & Miller, FEDERAL PRACTICE 14 & PROCEDURE, Civil 2d § 1357 (1990). ("The court should be especially reluctant to 15 dismiss on the basis of the pleadings when the asserted theory of liability is novel or 16 extreme, since it is important that new legal theories be explored and assayed in the 17 light of actual facts rather than a pleader's suppositions.") This is such a case. There 18 is no reported decision concerning the employment of illegal immigrants as a RICO
19 predicate act by any court in the Ninth Circuit, and defendants have provided no 20 cognizable basis for preventing the plaintiffs from pressing their claims.

21 III. THE COMPLAINT SUFFICIENTLY ALLEGES THE 22 NECESSARY ELEMENTS OF RICO PREDICATE ACTS

23 According to the defendants, the Complaint should be dismissed because the 24 plaintiffs do not allege any predicate acts under RICO. In fact, the Complaint properly 25 alleges all the elements of two different categories of predicate offenses against both 26 Zirkle and Matson.

1 A. Plaintiffs Allege Violations Of § 274 Of The Immigration and Nationality
2 Act (8 U.S.C. § 1324(a)(3)(A))

3 In 1996, Congress made § 274 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C.
4 § 1324(a)(3)(A)) a RICO predicate offense.⁵ Section 274 imposes criminal sanctions 5 against :

6 Any person who, during any 12-month period, knowingly 7 hires for employment at least 10 individuals with actual 8 knowledge that the individuals are aliens described in 9 subparagraph (B).... [8 U.S.C. § 1324(a)(3)(A)]

10 In turn, subparagraph B states that "aliens" means one who:

11 (1) is an unauthorized alien . . . and 12 (2) has been brought into the United States in violation of [8 13 U.S.C. § 1324(a)].

14 8 U.S.C. § 1324(a)(3)(B). Finally, 8 U.S.C. § 1324(a) provides specific offenses where an 15 unauthorized alien has either been (1) brought into the United States; (2) transported 16 or moved in interstate commerce; (3) concealed, harbored or shielded from detection; or 17 (4) encouraged or induced to enter the United States illegally.

18 Contrary to the defendants' argument, plaintiffs have plainly alleged that the 19 defendants violated § 274. Indeed, the Complaint alleges Matson and Zirkle have been 20 engaged in an "illegal immigrant hiring scheme" of knowingly employing illegal 21 immigrant workers in each year since 1996. ¶¶ 20-32.⁶ Specifically, plaintiffs allege 22 Matson hired certain of 493 workers having false/fraudulent identification documents, 23 "with actual knowledge that each person was an illegal immigrant (alien) who was not 24 eligible to be employed in the U.S., and Matson also knew that each person was either

25 ⁵ This section is codified at 8 U.S.C. § 1324(a)(3)(A) and is made a RICO predicate 26 by 18 U.S.C. § 1961(1)(F).

⁶ References preceded by "¶" are to plaintiffs' Complaint.

1 smuggled into the U.S. and/or harbored once he or she was in the U.S.” ¶ 29. See 2 United States v. Kim, 193 F.3d 567(2d Cir. 1999) (knowingly hiring unauthorized alien 3 constitutes “harboring.”) Plaintiffs further allege that Matson hired at least 50 of these 4 493 employees in each year since 1996, that the practice is ongoing, and that the 5 company maintained a workforce “comprised of approximately 50% illegal immigrants” 6 during the last three years. ¶ 29.

7 The INS has made similar findings against Zirkle. Id. The Complaint 8 specifically alleges that Zirkle “has employed at least 50 illegal immigrants, with 9 actual knowledge that each one was illegal and ineligible for employment, and with 10 knowledge that each one was either smuggled into the U.S. or harbored once in the 11 U.S.” Id. at ¶ 32. These facts establish repeated violations of § 274 of the Immigration 12 and Nationality Act, and RICO, by Matson and Zirkle. For purposes of this motion, the 13 Court must take them as true. “On a motion to dismiss we are required to read the 14 complaint charitably, to take all well-pleaded facts as true, and to assume that all 15 general allegations embrace whatever specific facts might be necessary to support 16 them.” Peloza v. Capistrano Unified Sch. Dist., 37 F.3d 517, 521 (9th Cir. 1994), cert.
17 denied, 515 U.S. 1173 (1995).

18 1. Plaintiffs Need Not Allege The Facts Demanded By Defendants

19 Disregarding the fundamental tenets of notice pleading, defendants move to 20 dismiss the plaintiffs’ § 274-based RICO claim under Fed. R. Civ. P. 8.⁷ Contrary to 21

22 ⁷ Although this circuit has not squarely addressed the issue, courts that have are 23 in agreement that RICO cases are subject to Rule 8 pleading standards unless fraud is 24 alleged, which invokes Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b) as to those specific predicate acts.
25 “[A]llegations of non-fraud based predicate acts [under RICO] need only . . . contain a 26 ‘short and plain statement’ showing the pleader is entitled to relief.” Colony At

1 the defendants' demand for reams of information about each and every illegal employee 2 they have hired:

3 Our system of notice pleading 'does not require a claimant to 4 set out in detail the facts upon which he bases his claim.'
5 Instead, all the Rules require is a short and plain statement 6 of the claim, that will give the defendant fair notice of what 7 the plaintiff's claim is and the grounds upon which it rests Thus, these liberal pleading rules only require that the averments of the complaint sufficiently establish a basis for judgment against the defendant." [Citations

8 Yamaguchi v. United States Dep't of the Air Force, 109 F.3d 1475, 1481 (9th Cir. 1997).

9 Or, as another federal circuit court has cogently enunciated the philosophy of notice 10 pleading, "[A] complaint is not required to allege all, or any, of the facts logically 11 entailed by the claim . . . Litigants are entitled to discovery before being put to their 12 proof, and treating the allegations of the complaint as a statement of the party's proof
13 leads to windy complaints and defeats the function of Rule 8." Bennett v. Schmidt, 153 14 F.3d 516, 518-519 (7th Cir. 1998) (holding "I was turned down for a job because of my 15 race," sufficient to state claim for discrimination).⁸

16 Moreover, courts have no authority to impose heightened pleading requirements 17 beyond what Rule 8 requires. Leatherman v. Tarrant County Narcotics Intelligence &

19 not require a claimant to set out in detail the facts upon which he bases his claim.")

24 holding that Rule 9(b) specificity was required for non-fraud predicates).

25 ⁸ The rule requires, in relevant part, "a short and plain statement of the claim 26 showing that the pleader is entitled to relief . . ." Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(1).

1 Thus, to withstand the motion, the bulk of the Complaint must simply meet the Rule 8 2 notice standards.⁹ RICO complaints are no exception to the Rule.

3 2. Defendants' Argument is Inconsistent with Rule 8

4 The defendants argue that the Complaint inadequately pleads violations of § 274
5 of the Immigration and Nationality Act. Defs. Br. at 7-11. Specifically, the defendants 6 contend that the Complaint has not given "fair notice of the alleged facts on which 7 plaintiffs' claims are based" because "plaintiffs fail to allege when any Zirkle or Matson 8 employees were smuggled into the U.S., where they were smuggled into the U.S., how 9 they were smuggled into the U.S., by whom they were smuggled into the U.S., whether 10 they had authorization to enter the U.S., or how Zirkle or Matson could have had 11 'actual knowledge' of such smuggling." Id. at 8, 10. The defendants cite no authority 12 in support of their argument that Rule 8 requires that all, or any, of these facts be 13 pled.¹⁰

14 In fact, as outlined above, the Complaint more than adequately puts the 15 defendants on notice as to the substance and nature of plaintiffs' claim. Accordingly, 16 plaintiffs need not plead the details the defendants seek surrounding the smuggling 17 and/or harboring of the hundreds of illegal immigrants defendants are alleged to have 18 employed since 1996. Were the plaintiffs to draft such an incredibly prolix complaint,

19 _____
20 ⁹ The Complaint's allegations of mail fraud (§§ 33-39), are subject to the 21 heightened pleading requirements of Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b), as will be examined below.

22 ¹⁰ In fact the position the defendants advocate, that plaintiffs must plead all of the 23 facts underlying the complicated statutory predicate acts incorporated within RICO, is 24 so extreme that only one federal circuit has ever had to address it. In Rose v. Bartlett, 25 871 F.2d 331, 355 (3d Cir. 1989) the court held, "It is the function of discovery to fill in 26 the details, and of trial to establish fully each element of the cause of action."

1 they would surely violate the express dictate of Rule 8, which requires "a short and 2 concise statement of the facts."

3 Moreover, the plaintiffs have pleaded virtually all of the relevant facts that any 4 plaintiff could possess about a clandestine illegal immigrant hiring scheme prior to 5 discovery. Indeed, at this point, much of the relevant evidence is in the exclusive 6 possession of defendants. Plaintiffs' counsel have conducted an investigation of the 7 facts surrounding the illegal immigrant hiring scheme, particularly a Freedom of 8 Information Act request on the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) for the 9 agency's files detailing its law enforcement actions directed at Matson and Zirkle.¹¹ 10 Therefore, in addition to violating the letter and spirit of Rule 8, the depth of fact 11 pleading sought by the defendants would effectively preclude all plaintiffs from ever 12 being able to pursue their claims in court. See, e.g., Neubronner v. Milken, 6 F.3d 666, 13 672 (9th Cir. 1993) (where information is uniquely within a defendant's possession, a 14 plaintiff will "not be expected to have personal knowledge of the relevant facts.") As 15 such an outcome is patently inconsistent with Rule 8, it is not surprising that the 16 defendants fail to cite any authority to support their position.¹²

17
18 ¹¹ The INS denied counsels' initial Request, from which an appeal was successfully 19 undertaken, resulting in the production of considerable documentation of the facts of 20 the INS investigation of defendants, although not the depth of detail the motion argues 21 must be pled.

22 ¹² Nor can defendants take any comfort from Bach v. Mason, 190 F.R.D. 567 (D.
23 Idaho 1999) (Defs. Br. at 8). The complaint in Bach alleged, in relevant part, "All of 24 said defendants, and each of them . . . having committed . . . multi-layers of illegal and 25 corrupt activities and pursuits . . ." without specifying any specific predicate acts 26 committed by any specific persons. Id. at 572. The Court found such allegations

1 B. Plaintiffs Have Adequately Alleged Mail Fraud

2 1. Mailing Knowingly False I-9 Forms Constitutes a Scheme to 3 Defraud

4 “To allege a violation of the mail fraud statute, it is necessary to show that 5 (1) the defendants formed a scheme or artifice to defraud; (2) the defendants used . . .
6 the United States mails in furtherance of the scheme; and (3) the defendants did so 7 with the specific intent to deceive or defraud.” Rothman v. Vedder Park Management, 8 912 F.2d 315, 316 (9th Cir. 1990). Citing Rothman, the defendants contend that the 9 mailing of fraudulent I-9 forms to the INS “could not, as a matter of law, be considered 10 ‘reasonably calculated to deceive persons of ordinary prudence and comprehension’ at 11 the INS.” Defs. Br. at 14-15. However, Rothman does not support this statement. In 12 Rothman, the court held that a letter accompanying a lease and alleged to be 13 inconsistent with a provision in the lease could not be deemed to be fraudulent where 14 the inconsistency was subject to interpretation, and thus not necessarily inconsistent 15 with the lease. Id. at 317. In contrast, the Complaint here leaves no room for 16 interpretation, as it alleges that the I-9 forms are falsely attested as accurate by 17 Matson and Zirkle. ¶ 35. Thus, Rothman does not support the position the defendants 18 take, and no other authority is cited.

19 However, contrary to the defendants’ position, the Second Circuit has held that 20 the submission of a false I-9 form to the INS constitutes an “employment scheme” 21 supporting a criminal conviction. See Kim, 193 F.3d at 575. Kim thus flatly rejects the 22 defendants’ argument that the submission of false I-9 forms is not an actionable

23

24 “failed to state a [RICO] claim.” Id. Bach has no application to the instant case, 25 which is pled with considerable detail, specifying which defendant committed which 26 predicate acts in as much specificity as could reasonably be expected of any plaintiff.

1 scheme. Defs. Br. at 14. Finally, the argument that the IRS cannot be defrauded is 2 refuted by mail fraud RICO cases involving other government agencies. For example, 3 the Ninth Circuit has repeatedly held that the mailing of fraudulent tax returns to the 4 IRS constitutes mail fraud, supporting a RICO conviction. United States v. Busher, 817
5 F.2d 1409, 1412 (9th Cir. 1987). If the defendants' reasoning had merit, such a 6 conviction could not occur because the IRS, as the nation's tax enforcement agency, is 7 the entity responsible for determining whether tax returns are valid, and would 8 therefore be immunized from being defrauded. Therefore, plaintiffs have alleged facts 9 supporting the mail fraud claim, and the motion must be denied.

10 2. Plaintiffs Meet The Requirements Of Rule 9

11 Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b) provides that, "In all averments of fraud . . . the 12 circumstances constituting fraud . . . shall be stated with particularity." Under Ninth 13 Circuit precedent, this Rule requires plaintiffs to plead "the time, place, and specific 14 content of the false representations as well as the identities of the parties to the 15 misrepresentation."¹³ Schreiber Distrib. Co. v. Serv-Well Furniture Co., Inc., 806 F.2d 16 1393, 1401 (9th Cir. 1986) (general allegations of mail and wire fraud dismissed for 17 failure to comply with Rule 9 where they "failed to mention any use of the mails or 18 telephone.") Id. However, the Ninth Circuit also holds that Rule 9 "may be relaxed as 19 to matters peculiarly within the opposing party's knowledge . . . Such 'an exception 20 exists where, as in cases of corporate fraud, the plaintiffs cannot be expected to have 21

22 ¹³ Accord Fecht v. Price Co., 70 F.3d 1078, 1082 (9th Cir. 1995), cert. denied, 517
23 U.S. 1136 (1996); Semegen v. Weidner, 780 F.2d 727, 731 (9th Cir. 1985) ("Rule 9(b) 24 ensures that allegations of fraud are specific enough to give defendants notice of the 25 particular misconduct which is alleged to constitute the fraud charged so that they can 26 defend against the charge and not just deny that they have done anything wrong").

1 personal knowledge of the facts constituting the wrongdoing.” Wool v. Tandem
2 Computers, Inc., 818 F.2d 1433, 1439 (9th Cir. 1987) (dismissal of RICO claim reversed 3 where plaintiff lacked identity of corporate insiders who made fraudulent statements 4 prior to discovery but other details were supplied); accord Wegbreit v. Marley Orchards 5 Corp., 793 F. Supp. 957, 961 (E.D. Wash. 1991) (allegation that securities offering 6 “misrepresented the reasonableness of the financial forecasts which were included in 7 the offering,” without further detail, satisfied Rule 9(b)’s time, content and place 8 requirements without any reference to specific acts or roles of corporate insiders).

9 Further, in complex commercial fraud cases involving detailed statutory 10 requirements and a sophisticated alleged deception by a defendant, the defendant will 11 not be permitted to hide behind Rule 9(b). A defendant cannot bury the fraud in 12 hundreds or thousands of individual transactions, or disperse authority for the 13 individual steps in a fraudulent scheme, and then charge that the plaintiff has failed to 14 particularize the specific fraudulent transactions or culpable players. “The sufficiency 15 of the pleading ... depends ‘upon the nature of the case, the complexity or simplicity of 16 the transaction or occurrence, the relationship of the parties and the determination of 17 how much circumstantial detail is necessary to give notice to the adverse party and 18 enable him to prepare a responsive pleading.” United States ex rel. O’Keefe v.
19 McDonnell Douglas Corp., 918 F. Supp. 1338, 1345 (E.D. Mo. 1996) (emphasis added).

20 Thus, in certain circumstances, the heightened standards of Rule 9(b) will be 21 relaxed in evaluating allegations of fraud. As the Court recognized in In re Hanford 22 Nuclear Reservation Litig., 780 F. Supp. 1551, 1577 (E.D. Wash. 1991), “[w]hen the 23 issues are complicated or the transactions cover a long period of time, courts tend to 24 require less of the pleader.” Further, where information is uniquely within a 25 defendant’s possession, a plaintiff will “not be expected to have personal knowledge of 26

1 the relevant facts.” Neubronner v. Milken, 6 F.3d 666, 672 (9th Cir. 1993). In these 2 circumstances, a complaint must only set out facts from which a reasonable inference 3 of fraud may be drawn, and if it does so it may plead matters uniquely within the 4 defendant’s knowledge merely on “information and belief.” *Id.*¹⁴

5 The Complaint alleges the defendants have engaged in a scheme to mail 6 fraudulent I-9 forms in order to effectuate the illegal immigrant hiring scheme (“The 7 I-9 Mail Fraud Scheme”). ¶¶ 33-39. Plaintiffs allege that the defendants complete or 8 cause Selective to complete I-9 forms which they know falsely represent that particular 9 employees are authorized to be employed. (In particular, plaintiffs allege knowingly 10 false representations in the defendants’ attestations that particular job applicants are 11 eligible to work in the U.S. ¶ 35.) Plaintiffs further allege that each mailing is 12 undertaken “for the purpose of facilitating the hiring of an illegal immigrant.” Id. at 13 ¶ 37. Thus, the Complaint has satisfied place and content requirements of the Rule as 14 set out in Wool.

15 The defendants ignore Wool and contend the Complaint “fail[s] entirely to allege 16 the time, place, and specific content of the false representations, as well as the 17 identities of the parties to these misrepresentations. [Plaintiffs’] excuse for this 18 shortcoming is that they must conduct discovery.” Defs. Br. at 13 (emphasis in 19 original). In fact, the plaintiffs do plead the places and specific content of the 20 misrepresentations but cannot plead the dates or identities of the persons at this time.
21 Plaintiffs “excuse” for not doing so is in fact recognized by the Ninth Circuit, this Court 22 and every other federal court as wholly legitimate. Plaintiffs simply cannot plead the 23 time of each mailing as demanded by the defendants, because they do not yet have

1 access to the 1-9 forms. Similarly, the identities of the individuals who prepared and 2 mailed the forms is not known, and need not be pled under the circumstances.
3 Accordingly, the complaint satisfies the standards of Rule 9(b). Wool v. Tandem 4 Computers, Inc., 818 F.2d at 1439.

5 Requests to require the detail demanded by defendants have routinely been 6 rejected by courts in similar circumstances. In O'Keefe, 918 F. Supp. 1338, the plaintiff 7 alleged that McDonnell Douglas had systematically mischarged labor hours by 8 directing employees to charge their hours worked on other projects to the government
9 contracts at issue. The defendant argued that the complaint did not sufficiently detail 10 the particulars of the fraud, such as specific employees involved, specific hours 11 mischarged, and the associated costs. The court concluded that a description of the 12 allegedly manipulated accounting system satisfied Rule 9(b), and that detailed 13 allegations of subsequent mechanical steps were not required: "With regard to 14 allegations of claiming improperly billed labor costs, the Complaint [adequately] 15 outlines how [McDonnell Douglas] accomplished the mischarging through its 16 automated time accounting system and details to which government contracts the costs
17 were wrongly charged." Id. at 1345. (Emphasis added.)

18 The court in United States ex rel. Roby v. Boeing Co., 184 F.R.D. 107 (S.D. Ohio 19 1998), also expressly rejected the argument pressed by defendants here. In Roby, 20 Boeing asserted that Rule 9(b) required the relator to explain how each of 130 claims 21 for payment (submitted on Forms DD-250) was false by enumerating in the complaint 22 the particular way in which the helicopter gears to which they related diverged from 23 specifications. The court ruled that the complaint adequately detailed the various 24 defects in the gears, that these defects tainted every one of Boeing's claims for 25
26

1 payment, and that Rule 9(b) did not demand a particularized analysis of each claim for 2 payment:

3 We disagree that Boeing is only able to speculate as to which 4 of the hundreds of Speco-manufactured gears presently in 5 service is alleged to be nonconforming since the 6 Government's Amended Complaint provides at Paragraph 7 141 that Boeing acted with the knowledge of falsity or 8 reckless disregard for the truth with respect to every CH-9 47(D) helicopter it delivered to the United States under 10 Forms DD-250.¹⁵

11 In Roby, the overall description of the fraud negated the need for an exhaustive 12 enumeration of each specific fraudulent act. The same is true here.

13 Similarly, in United States ex rel. Thompson v. Columbia/HCA Healthcare 14 Corp., 20 F. Supp. 2d 1017,1049 (S.D. Tex. 1998), the court specifically rejected the 15 contention that the relator had to enumerate each false claim, holding that a 16 description of the "nature of the fraudulent scheme" satisfies Rule 9(b) and ordering 17 that discovery may proceed:

18 The Court also finds that the complaint has been pled with 19 sufficient particularity to satisfy Rule 9(b). The basic 20 framework, procedures, the nature of the fraudulent scheme, 21 and the financial arrangements and inducements among the 22 parties that give rise to the Relator's belief that fraud has 23 occurred have been alleged with specificity; Plaintiffs are 24 entitled to discovery before being required to list every false 25 claim, its dates, the individuals responsible, and why each 26 patient was not eligible for Medicare.

27 In a case of this complexity, specifying each illegal hire would require pleading 28 not only incidental evidentiary details, but massive amounts of such details. Courts 29 have made clear that pleading such evidence is not required by Rule 9(b). The 30 Complaint fully describes the scheme, but it does not enumerate each illegal act as 31 defendants demand. These evidentiary details are not required:

32 ¹⁵ Id. at 110.

1 We decline to require that a complaint must allege specific 2 shipments to specific customers at specific times with a 3 specific dollar amount of improperly recognized revenue; "we 4 cannot make Rule 9(b) carry more weight than it was meant 5 to bear" Because "we do not test evidence at this stage," 6 the complaint should go forward.

7 Cooper v. Pickett, 137 F.3d 616, 627 (9th Cir. 1997).

8 A final reason that the specification defendants demand is not required by 9 Rule 9(b) is that defendants' are in exclusive possession of most of the information, and 10 there is no reason that plaintiffs would have access to it. As one court ruled in 11 analogous circumstances:

12 An exception to Rule 9(b)'s particularity requirement exists 13 where the relevant facts lie exclusively within the knowledge
14 and control of the opposing party. In such a case, pleading 15 upon information and belief is permissible, but plaintiff must 16 still plead a statement of facts upon which his belief is based.
The court concludes that this is an appropriate case in which to apply the exception to Rule 9(b). Defendants do not contend that plaintiff has equal access to the documents he seeks Rather, they argue that plaintiff should be expected to allege the relevant facts based on memory.
Plaintiff logically responds that he has not worked at OCS since February of 1993 and that he can hardly be expected to remember the exact dates of grant applications or reports.

17 Wilkins ex rel. United States v. Ohio, 885 F. Supp. 1055, 1061 (S.D. Ohio 1995). This 18 Court too should reject defendants' attempt to erect such an insurmountable pleading 19 hurdle.

20 3. Plaintiffs Can Discover Defendant's 1-9 Forms

21 At various points in their brief, the defendants argue that 8 U.S.C. § 1324a(b)(5)
22 bars plaintiffs from conducting discovery of defendant's 1-9 forms Defs. Br. at 13, 24.¹⁶

23
24 ¹⁶ An I-9 form is defined by the Act as "the form used for purposes of § 274(b)(1)(A) 25" Historical and Statutory Notes, 8 U.S.C. § 1324a(d)(4). The Act further provides, 26 "A form designated by the Attorney General under this subsection [the I-9] and any

1 While the defendants' argument, even if correct, would not warrant dismissal of any of 2 the plaintiffs' claims, the defendants are simply wrong. Accordingly, the defendants 3 having raised the issue, the Court can and should rule that the 1-9 forms are 4 discoverable.

5 The defendants cite no authority supporting their conclusion that the statutory 6 provision at issue has any effect on discovery of I-9 forms in civil cases. In fact, federal 7 courts have consistently held that similar statutory provisions, enacted for privacy 8 considerations, apply only to the government (not the private parties who submit the 9 forms), and in any event, do not bar the application of Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1), 10 permitting discovery "regarding any matter, not privileged, which is relevant to the 11 subject matter involved." Most significantly, the Supreme Court has ruled that:

12 prohibitions against disclosure [of census data pursuant to 13 federal statute] run only against the officials receiving such 14 information and do not purport to generally clothe census 15 information with secrecy . . . Indeed, when congress has 16 intended like reports not to be subject to compulsory process 17 it has said so.

20 despite statute designating the materials "confidential" and "prohibited from us[e] . . .
21 for other than statistical purposes; and from making any publication thereof . . .") One 22 district court in the Ninth Circuit, relying upon St. Regis Paper Co., reached a similar 23 conclusion as to federal tax returns. Young v. United States, 149 F.R.D. 199, 201 (S.D.
24 Cal. 1993) (permitting discovery of defendants' tax returns in civil case). See also

1 Richards v. Stephens, 118 F.R.D. 338, 339 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) (argument that 26 U.S.C.
2 §§ 6103 and 7213, providing for confidentiality of tax returns, prohibit courts from 3 ordering production of them under Fed. R. Civ. P. 26 "borders on the frivolous, as tax 4 law only regulates tax officials from using returns, but has no effect on Court's power 5 over taxpayer to produce them.")

6 Since the statutory provision of the Act at issue does not purport to exempt I-9 7 forms from compulsory process, and Congress gave no other indication of such an 8 intent, this Court should find that the I-9 forms are discoverable. Any other 9 interpretation is unsupported by any authority.

10 Moreover, even if the Court did preclude or limit discovery of the I-9 forms, that 11 would not warrant dismissal of the case under Rule 12(b)(6) for failure to state a cause 12 of action. The I-9 forms are simply evidence plaintiffs will seek to discover. The illegal 13 immigrant hiring scheme can be proven through other evidence. Even the I-9 mail 14 fraud scheme could be proven without the actual production of the I-9 forms. Plaintiffs 15 could obtain an admission that the forms were in fact mailed or establish the mailing 16 through another form of discovery. Thus, dismissal of either scheme for failure to state
17 a cause of action under RICO is improper.¹⁷

18
19 20 21
22 ¹⁷ Although the defendants point out that 8 U.S.C. § 1324a does not require that I-23 9 forms be mailed to the INS, Defs. Br. at 14, they do not contest that they have 24 mailed I-9 forms to the INS. Indeed, plaintiffs' allegations to this effect – based upon 25 their pre-filing investigation – are dispositive of the defendants' arguments in this 26 motion to dismiss.

1 IV. PLAINTIFFS HAVE STANDING TO SUE UNDER RICO

2 A. Because Plaintiffs Allege a "Direct" Injury, Holmes Supports Their 3 Claim

4 The Supreme Court has applied common law "proximate causation" analysis to 5 RICO claims. See Holmes, 503 U.S. at 268. Thus, in order to have standing to sue 6 under RICO, the plaintiff must allege an injury proximately caused by a RICO 7 violation; in Holmes, the Court held the plaintiff could not sue because it had not 8 suffered a "direct" injury since its injuries were wholly derivative from injuries inflicted 9 upon third parties. Id. at 276. In stark contrast, plaintiffs and the class here are the 10 sole and direct victims of the defendants' illegal immigrant hiring scheme. Thus, 11 Holmes fully supports plaintiffs' standing to sue under RICO.

12 Holmes concerned a suit brought by the SIPC, the not-for-profit entity obliged to 13 satisfy securities purchasers' claims for account losses in the event their dealers could 14 not satisfy the claims. Id. at 261-62. The SIPC sued defendant Holmes for securities 15 fraud, which allegedly caused the collapse of two securities firms. Id. at 262. Because 16 the firms' dealers were unable to cover the losses, the SIPC had to pay $13 million to 17 the customers of the defrauded firms. Id. at 263. The SIPC sued Holmes for 18 recoupment of this money. Thus, the SIPC's claim for damages arose because of the 19 following attenuated sequence of events: (1) the defendant defrauded customers; 20 (2) the customers thereupon lost their securities; (3) the customers' dealers could not 21 cover the losses; therefore (4) the SIPC was contractually obligated to cover the losses.
22 Id. Only then did the SIPC sue Holmes for alleged RICO violations. The Supreme 23 Court concluded the SIPC was not "directly harmed" by the racketeering (securities 24 fraud). It stated that the SIPC's harm was "purely contingent on the harm suffered by 25 the broker-dealers . . . [t]he broker-dealers simply cannot pay their bills, and only that 26 intervening insolvency connects the conspirators' acts to the losses suffered by the

1 nonpurchasing customers and general creditors.” Id. at 271. Thus, an intervening 2 event, the insolvency of the securities brokership, broke the causal link between the 3 plaintiffs injury and the defendant’s conduct, so that the plaintiff was a “secondary 4 victim.” Id. By contrast, the causation alleged in the instant case is direct: Matson 5 and Zirkle employ illegal immigrants for the purpose of depressing wage levels, and 6 the scheme is successful. Plaintiffs’ wages are depressed as a direct result of the 7 scheme.

8 The crux of the Court’s decision that the plaintiff in Holmes did not allege a 9 direct injury was that it had not been the target of the RICO violations. These 10 violations, securities fraud, were directed at investors in the securities which 11 eventually became worthless. The plaintiff’s “damages” arose from its obligation to 12 cover the losses of the broker-dealers, who themselves were obligated to pay for their 13 customers’ securities losses (the actual targets of the RICO violations) by statute.
14 Thus, the Court reasoned that the plaintiffs in Holmes were no different from other 15 plaintiffs “who complained of harm flowing merely from the misfortunes visited upon a 16 third person by the defendants’ acts” Id. at 268.

17 In deciding Holmes the Court drew upon its antitrust law proximate causation 18 analysis, particularly as enunciated in Associated General Contractors, Inc. v.
19 California State Council of Carpenters, 459 U.S. 519 (1983). Id. at 270, n.15, 271.¹⁸ 20 That case held, in relevant part:

21 [W]here the plaintiff sustains injury from the defendant’s 22 conduct to a third person, it is too remote, if the plaintiff 23 sustains no other than a contract relation to such a third 24 person, or is under contract obligation on his account, and 25 the injury consists only in impairing the ability or inclination 26 of such person to perform his part, or in increasing the ¹⁸ RICO was modeled, in part, on the Clayton Antitrust Act.

1 plaintiff's expense or labor of fulfilling such contract . . . [Id.
2 at 533, n.25 (emphasis added).]

3 This was precisely the plaintiff's situation in Holmes, and the reason the Court 4 concluded its alleged injury was not directly caused by the RICO violations.

5 The facts of the instant case are entirely different. The plaintiffs are not 6 alleging a contractual or statutory obligation to cover someone else's losses. They are 7 the only victims of the illegal hiring scheme. They are alleging their own losses
8 directly caused by the illegal immigrant hiring scheme. Accordingly, there is no third 9 party which has more directly borne their damages, depressed wages, and is more 10 appropriately situated to bring this suit. If plaintiffs cannot sue for their depressed 11 wages, their claims will go unremedied.

12 B. The Defendants' Attempt to Apply Holmes Is Legally and Factually 13 Erroneous

14 Nevertheless, the defendants argue that plaintiffs fail the "direct injury" test of 15 Holmes. First, they argue, "there is no allegation the plaintiffs were paid less than 16 other similarly situated workers in other similarly situated agricultural facilities. . ."
17 Defs. Br. at 17. No authority is cited for this alleged pleading requirement. In fact, 18 according to the Complaint, "Matson and Zirkle are conducting the Illegal Immigrant 19 Hiring Scheme for the purpose of depressing employee wages below the levels they 20 would otherwise be required to pay if they were unable to hire substantial numbers of 21 illegal immigrants . . ." ¶¶ 3, 15(b). Once again, for the purposes of this motion the 22 Court must assume these well-pled allegations are true. Therefore, the wage levels at 23 "similarly situated agricultural facilities" are irrelevant to the plaintiffs' theory of 24 recovery. If plaintiffs can prove at trial that their wages would be higher absent the 25 illegal immigrant hiring scheme, they will be able to prevail. Thus, the motion must 26 be denied as defendants have failed to meet their burden of proving plaintiffs cannot

1 recover under any set of facts. See, e.g., Fobbs v. Holy Cross Health Sys. Corp., 29 F.3d
2 1439, 1449 (9th Cir. 1994) (in evaluating the Complaint, “any doubts should be 3 construed in favor of the pleader”), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1127 (1995).

4 C. *Holmes’ Three-Part Analysis for “Indirect” Injury Further 5 Demonstrates That Plaintiffs Have RICO Standing

6 The defendants seek to apply the three justifications for not permitting 7 indirectly injured parties to recover, discussed in Holmes, to the instant case. See Defs.
8 Br. at 18-19, citing Holmes, 503 U.S. at 269-70. As discussed above, this analysis 9 simply does not apply because the plaintiffs’ claims are direct and satisfy the 10 proximate causation analysis enunciated in Holmes.

11 In any event, a consideration of the three justifications proffered by the Holmes 12 court demonstrates that none of them apply to this case. One of the factors that 13 justifies not compensating indirect victims is that “claims of the indirectly injured 14 would force courts to adopt complicated rules apportioning damages among plaintiffs 15 removed at different levels of injury from the violative acts, to obviate the risk of 16 multiple recoveries.” Id. at 269. Here, of course, there is no need to apportion damages 17 and no risk of multiple recovery. The plaintiffs, and the plaintiffs alone, have suffered 18 damages as a result of the illegal immigrant hiring scheme.

19 A second factor, addressed by the defendants (Defs. Br. at 19), is that “directly 20 injured victims can generally be counted on to vindicate the law as private attorneys 21 general . . .” Holmes, 503 U.S. at 269-70, citing Associated General Contractors, 459 22 U.S. at 541-42. This rationale once again fully supports plaintiffs’ standing here as 23 there are no other “directly injured victims” to sue for plaintiffs’ lost wages here. In 24 this regard, the argument proffered by the defendants — that “the INS can be counted 25 on to vindicate the law . . .” — demonstrates beyond any doubt that Holmes cannot bar 26 plaintiffs’ claims here. The INS has no claim for depressed wages; only individual

1 workers possess such claims. Therefore, any claim of the INS stemming from the 2 illegal immigrant hiring scheme would be to vindicate other rights and redress other 3 losses, not those of the plaintiffs.

4 Nor does the third Holmes rationale — that “the less direct an injury is, the 5 more difficult it becomes to ascertain the amount of a plaintiff’s damages attributable 6 to the violation” — have any application here. While the defendants half-heartedly 7 assert the existence of “other independent factors” that might impact the plaintiffs’ 8 wages, see Defs. Br. at 17, none of those alleged factors is a function of any 9 “indirectness” in the plaintiffs’ injuries. All the defendants have done is to (improperly) 10 make unsubstantiated assertions of fact which, if supported by admissible evidence at 11 trial, might contest the plaintiffs’ allegations (which they will support with proof at the 12 appropriate time) that the defendants’ hiring of illegal immigrants has depressed their 13 wages.

14 D. Imagineering Provides No Help To Defendants Here

15 The defendants cite one RICO case, Imagineering, Inc. v. Kiewit Pacific Co., 976 16 F.2d 1303 (9th Cir. 1992) for the proposition that plaintiffs claims are barred by 17 Holmes. See Defs. Br. at 19. But, as a careful analysis demonstrates, Imagineering is 18 not on point.

19 The plaintiffs in Imagineering were subcontractors who alleged they would have 20 been awarded contracts by general contractors on construction projects but for a 21 scheme to circumvent a law requiring the awarding of certain public works projects to 22 firms owned by minorities and women. The Ninth Circuit affirmed the dismissal of the 23 RICO case on two grounds: First, the plaintiffs could not establish they would have 24 received the subcontracts at issue because even if the contractor who successfully 25 obtained the contract had been required to forego the contract, the contract would not 26

1 necessarily have been awarded to the second lowest bidder (with whom they were 2 aligned). Id. at 1311. Under the prevailing law, the contract would have been required 3 to be rebid. Id. Additionally, the court found that even if plaintiffs had obtained the 4 subcontracts at issue, there was "no guarantee [they] . . . would not be substituted 5 during the pendency of the contract." Id. Second, the court concluded that under 6 Holmes, plaintiffs' claims were barred because they were merely "indirect" victims of 7 the racketeering. Id. However, the court reached this conclusion only after plaintiffs 8 conceded they "were not the direct victims of defendants' unlawful activities." Id. It 9 was undisputed that "the intervening inability of the prime contractors to secure the 10 contracts . . . was the direct cause of plaintiffs' injuries." Id. at 1312. Thus, the 11 plaintiffs' damages arose solely due to the damages visited upon a third party, 12 precisely as in Holmes. By contrast, the Complaint does not allege any such scenario 13 or injured third party. Therefore, Imagineering is simply not on point.

14 E. The National Labor Relations Act Has No Bearing On This Case

15 The defendants argue that the fact that the National Labor Relations Act 16 (NLRA) applies to undocumented immigrants, conferring upon them the same rights as 17 American citizens who are covered by the Act, including the right to unionize, defeats 18 any claim brought on behalf of plaintiffs concerning wage levels. Defs. Br. at 18-19.
19 Plaintiffs do not dispute that the NLRA applies to illegal immigrants. However, that 20 fact has no bearing on the plaintiffs' claims that Matson and Zirkle are employing 21 illegal immigrants in order to depress the wages of all their employees. Neither the 22 NLRA nor the cases cited by the defendants outlaw the employment of undocumented 23 immigrants or their payment of depressed wages. Therefore, the argument that the 24 NLRA applies to undocumented immigrants is irrelevant. The defendants cite no 25 authority providing otherwise.
26

1 Finally, the related argument that the Complaint "rel[ies] on an 2 unsubstantiated assumption/generalization that unauthorized aliens are willing to 3 accept wages that are 'significantly lower' than wages would be in a labor market 4 comprised solely of legally authorized workers . . . [that] is too tenuous a basis for 5 asserting proximate causation, considered in light of the legal right of unauthorized 6 aliens to engage in union organizing . . ." Defs. Br. at 18, is simply inappropriate. As 7 stated above, plaintiffs need not "substantiate" claims made in the Complaint. All 8 well-pled facts must be taken as true. Thus, ¶ 22, alleging that, "Matson and Zirkle 9 . . . knowingly hire workers of illegal status because the illegal workers are willing to 10 accept wages that are significantly lower than wages would be in a labor market 11 comprised solely of legally authorized workers," is not debatable or rebuttable. It must 12 be taken as true for purposes of this motion. Therefore, the defendants' argument is 13 not a ground for dismissal.

14 V. PLAINTIFFS' RICO CLAIMS ARE NOT PREEMPTED

15 Incredibly in light of the clear Congressional authorization of private suits under 16 RICO, the defendants argue that there is no private right of action under RICO for 17 violations of § 274 of the Act because the "comprehensive scheme" of the Immigration 18 Reform and Control Act (IRCA)¹⁹ has preempted any such claim for civil damages.
19 Defs. Br. at 21-24. The defendants cite Nieto-Santos v. Fletcher Farms, 743 F.2d 638
20 (9th Cir. 1984)²⁰ as authority for this sweeping statement of law. However, that case, 21 decided before the enactment of the IRCA, simply holds that the Immigration and 22 Nationality Act does not create a private right of action for employment disputes. Id.

24 ¹⁹ The IRCA is codified at 8 U.S.C. §1324a, as part of the Immigration and 25 Nationalization Act.

26 ²⁰ Defs.' Br. at 23.

1 at 641. Such cases, it holds, are matters of state law over which federal courts do not 2 have subject matter jurisdiction.²¹ Here, of course, the plaintiffs do not argue that the 3 Immigration and Nationality Act creates a private right to bring a RICO action — that 4 right of action is created by the RICO statute. See 18 U.S.C. § 1961(1)(F) (making 5 violations of § 274 of the Immigration and Nationality Act predicate acts for RICO).

6 Characteristically, then, the defendants cite no authority to support their 7 argument that “the attempt by plaintiffs to independently enforce the immigration 8 laws through RICO should be deemed preempted by the IRCA.” Defs. Br. at 24. Once 9 again, the defendants ascribe an intent to Congress that is not to be found within the 10 IRCA itself, and for which they cite no applicable authority. Danielson v. Burnside- 11 OTT Aviation Training Center, Inc., 941 F.2d 1220, 1227 (D.C. Cir. 1991),²² holds that 12 RICO does not create a private right of action when the underlying statute does not 13 provide for one and is not among the statutes incorporated in RICO as predicate acts.
14 This is distinguishable from the instant case in which § 274 of the Immigration and 15 Nationality Act is a RICO predicate. Thus, if the Court were to adopt the defendants’ 16 argument, it would effectively repeal 18 U.S.C. § 1964 which confers a “private right of 17 action” on parties who have been damaged by RICO violations.²³ “[RICO] . . . provides 18 a private civil action to recover treble damages for injury ‘by reason of a violation of its 19 substantive provisions. 18 U.S.C. § 1964(c).” Sedima S.P.R.L. v. Imrex Co., 473 U.S.
20 479, 481 (1985). “Congress . . . set out a far-reaching civil enforcement scheme, § 1964

21
22 ²¹ The defendants cite other cases standing for the same proposition. Defs. Br. at 23 23.

24 ²² Defs. Br. at 24.

25 ²³ Under 18 U.S.C. § 1964, “Any person injured in his business or property by 26 reason of a violation of section 1962 of this chapter may sue therefor . . .”

1 ...” Id. at 483. As the Supreme Court has noted in its most recent RICO case, “Both 2 statutes [RICO and the Clayton Antitrust Act] share a common congressional objective 3 of encouraging civil litigation . . . not merely to compensate victims but to turn them 4 into prosecutors, ‘private attorney’s general,’ dedicated to eliminating racketeering
5 activity.” Rotella v. Wood, ___ U.S. ___, 120 S. Ct. 1075, 1082, 145 L.Ed.2d 1047
6 (2000). Moreover, “[t]he courts are without authority to restrict the application of the 7 [RICO] statute.” United States v. Turkette, 452 U.S. 576, 587 (1981). Accordingly, this 8 Court has no authority to do what the defendants propose: constrict or disregard 9 RICO.”²⁴

10 Finally, the defendants’ argument is contrary to established rules of statutory 11 construction which favor the reconciliation of statutes having overlapping subject 12 matter. Thus, the Ninth Circuit holds that, “[To] the extent that statutes can be

13 _____
14 ²⁴ The defendants mistakenly rely on McDonough v. Gencorp, Inc., 750 F. Supp.
15 368, 371 (S.D. Ill. 1990) in support of their RICO preemption argument. Defs. Br. at 16 24. In Gencorp, the plaintiff attempted to recast violations of the National Labor 17 Relations Act, which the Supreme Court had held “preempts state and federal court 18 jurisdiction to remedy conduct ... prohibited by the ACT,” as mail fraud violations of 19 RICO. Id. at 369-70 (citation omitted). Following the Supreme Court’s lead, the 20 district court dismissed those RICO allegations. However, the district court held that 21 violations of § 186 of the NLRA, which is listed in RICO as a predicate act, could 22 proceed under RICO. Id. at 370. Gencorp supports plaintiffs position. Since § 274 of 23 the Immigration and Nationality Act is a RICO predicate, Congress obviously intended 24 it to be used in that manner. Moreover, since the Supreme Court has never held that 25 the IRCA preempts statutory federal claims of any sort, plaintiffs’ mail fraud claim can 26 also proceed.

1 harmonized, they should be . . ." Hellon & Assoc., Inc. v. Phoenix Resort Corp., 958 2 F.2d 295, 297 (9th Cir. 1992). Moreover, in the event the IRCA actually were 3 inconsistent with § 274 and RICO (which it is not, nor does the motion so contend), 4 plaintiffs would still prevail because the enactment of § 274 and its incorporation into 5 RICO post-date the IRCA. "[I]n case of an irreconcilable inconsistency between them 6 [conflicting statutes] the later and more specific statute usually controls the earlier and 7 more general one." Id. See also Boudette v. Barnette, 923 F.2d 754, 757 (9th Cir. 1991)
8 ("When two statutes conflict the general rule is that the statute last in time prevails as 9 the most recent expression of the legislature's will"). Therefore, the IRCA does not 10 preempt or bar plaintiffs' RICO claims here.

11 VI. PLAINTIFFS STATE A VIABLE CLAIM FOR CIVIL CONSPIRACY

12 A. The Complaint Properly Pleads A Claim For Civil Conspiracy Under 13 Washington Law

14 Contrary to defendants' contentions, there is no "novel question" as to whether 15 the alleged concerted violation of immigration law constitutes a civil conspiracy under 16 Washington law. As defendants neglect to inform this Court, civil conspiracy in 17 Washington is broadly defined and clearly encompasses the conduct alleged in the 18 Complaint. See, e.g., Lewis Pacific Dairymen's Asso. v. Turner, 50 Wash. 2d 762, 772, 19 314 P.2d 625 (1957) (citing Harrington v. Richeson, 40 Wash. 2d 557, 570, 245 P.2d 191 20 (1952)):

21 A conspiracy is a combination of two or more persons to 22 commit a criminal or unlawful act, or to commit a lawful act 23 by criminal or unlawful means; or a combination of two or 24 more persons by concerted action to accomplish an unlawful 25 purpose, or some purpose not in itself unlawful by unlawful 26 means. . . .

To constitute a conspiracy the purpose to be effected by it must be unlawful in its nature or in the means to be employed for its accomplishment

1 Accord, Deschamps v. Luther, 64 Wash. 2d 728, 393 P.2d 945 (1964); Sterling Bus.
2 Forms v. Thorpe, 82 Wash. App. 446, 451, 918 P.2d 531, 533 (1996). Conspirators are 3 jointly and severally liable for all the damages caused by the conspiracy both before 4 and after their entry into the conspiracy. Sterling, 82 Wash. App. at 454; Sears v.
5 International Brotherhood of Teamsters, C., S & H., 8 Wash. 2d 447, 452, 112 P.2d 850 6 (1941).

7 The plaintiff in a civil conspiracy case must prove the case by a 8 preponderance of the evidence, and must establish the existence of the conspiracy by 9 clear, cogent and convincing evidence. Corbit v. J.I. Case Co., 70 Wash. 2d 522, 529, 10 424 P.2d 290 (1967). But that standard has no application on a motion to dismiss, 11 where plaintiffs' allegations must be taken as true. Indeed, the "clear, cogent and 12 convincing evidence" standard does not even apply on a motion for summary judgment, 13 where the plaintiffs must come forward with factual support for their allegations.
14 Gerimonte v. Case, 42 Wash. App. 611, 615, 712 P.2d 876, 879 (1986) ("while clear, 15 cogent and convincing evidence is the proper standard of proof . . . at trial, 'it is not the 16 proper standard to be applied to determinations regarding summary judgment 17 motions.'").

18 Here, the plaintiffs have alleged that the defendants have conspired to commit 19 unlawful acts. See, e.g., ¶¶ 59, 61 (alleging conspiracy to violate the Immigration and 20 Nationality Act). Defendants have done so in order to depress the wages of plaintiffs 21 and the Class. ¶ 60, 62. Defendants' conspiracies have succeeded, and plaintiffs suffer 22 from depressed wages as a result. Id. Accordingly, plaintiffs state a claim for civil 23 conspiracy under well-established Washington law.

1 B. Plaintiffs' Civil Conspiracy Claim Is Not Preempted By The IRCA

2 Recognizing that they have no grounds to dismiss plaintiffs' civil conspiracy 3 claim under Washington law, the defendants assert that the claim is preempted by 4 "the comprehensive federal agency enforcement scheme mandated by the IRCA." Def.
5 Br. at 26. Alternatively, defendants assert, plaintiffs' civil conspiracy claim is 6 preempted by the express preemption clause of the IRCA – even though on its face that 7 clause preempts only State law sanctions, not common law claims for damages which 8 are compensatory, not punitive. Because the IRCA contains an express preemption 9 clause that does not apply to plaintiffs' claim, defendants' preemption arguments are 10 doomed to failure.

11 1. Because The IRCA Contains An Express Preemption Clause, Any 12 Arguments Based On "The Comprehensive Federal Scheme"
Cannot Prevail

13 As the United States Supreme Court has made clear, when a federal statute 14 includes an express preemption clause, that clause both defines and limits the 15 preemptive reach of the statutory scheme at issue. See, e.g., Cipollone v. Liggett Group, 16 Inc., 505 U.S. 504, 517 (1992):

17 When Congress has considered the issue of pre-emption and 18 has included in the enacted legislation a provision explicitly 19 addressing that issue, and when that provision provides a 20 "reliable indicium of congressional intent with respect to 21 state authority," Malone v. White Motor Corp., 435 U.S.
22 [497], 505 [1978], "there is no need to infer congressional 23 intent to pre-empt state laws from the substantive 24 provisions" of the legislation. California Federal Savings &
25 Loan Assn. v. Guerra, 479 U.S. 272, 282, 93 L. Ed. 2d 613, 26 107 S. Ct. 683 (1987) (opinion of Marshall, J.). Such reasoning is a variant of the familiar principle of expressio unius est exclusio alterius: Congress' enactment of a provision defining the pre-emptive reach of a statute implies that matters beyond that reach are not pre-empted. [Emphasis added.]

1 Here, as the defendants themselves point out, Congress has enacted an express 2 preemption provision. See 8 U.S.C. §1324a(h)(2). Pursuant to the above principles, 3 this section must be strictly and narrowly construed. Accordingly, there is neither 4 need nor license for this Court to “infer congressional intent to pre-empt state laws 5 from the substantive provisions” of the law. Guerra, 479 U.S. at 282. This Court 6 should thus reject out of hand defendants’ claim that the “comprehensive scheme” of 7 the IRCA preempts state common law damage claims. Preemption is explicitly 8 governed by the express preemption language of the IRCA.

9 2. Because Plaintiffs Bring A Civil Conspiracy Claim For Damages, 10 And Not For Sanctions, 8 U.S.C. § 1324a(h)(2) Poses No Bar To 11 Their Claim

12 Congress has expressly defined the preemptive reach of the IRCA as follows:

13 Preemption. The provisions of this section preempt any 14 State or local law imposing civil or criminal sanctions (other than through licensing and similar laws) upon those who employ, or recruit, or refer for a fee for employment, unauthorized aliens. [8 U.S.C. § 1342a(h)(2).]

15 While no reported decision has construed this language, the statute, on its face, 16 preempts only laws “imposing civil or criminal sanctions,” and hence does not preempt 17 common law damage claims. See, e.g., Cipollone, 505 U.S. at 524 (when Congress 18 enacts an express preemption clause, “each phrase within that clause limits the 19 universe” of laws preempted by that statute.)²⁵

20 The plain meaning of “sanction” does not include common law damage actions:

23 ²⁵ While the Cipollone Court held that “state law prohibitions” included at least 24 some common law damage claims, 505 U.S. at 522-23, the preemption clause at issue 25 in Cipollone did not include the qualifying language “imposing sanctions” that 26 Congress chose to include as a limitation to the preemptive reach of the IRCA.

1 Sanction. That part of a law which is designed to secure 2 enforcement by imposing a penalty for its violation or 3 offering a reward for its observance. For example, Fed. R.
4 Civ. P. 37 provides for sanctions for failure to comply with 5 discovery orders. *See also Contempt.*²⁶

6 The meaning of "sanction" is universally understood as referring to legislatively (or 7 sometimes judicially) created penalties for not complying with statutory law. Perhaps 8 most familiarly, Rule 11 of the Fed. R. Civ. P. provides for "sanctions" against 9 attorneys for failing to abide by the strictures of that rule. As defined in Rule 11:

10 Nature of Sanction; Limitations. A sanction imposed for 11 violation of this rule shall be limited to what is sufficient to 12 deter repetition of such conduct or comparable conduct by 13 others similarly situated. Subject to the limitations in 14 subparagraphs (A) and (B), the sanction may consist of, or 15 include, directives of a nonmonetary nature, an order to pay 16 a penalty into court, or if imposed on motion and warranted 17 for effective deterrence, an order directing payment to the 18 movant of some or all of the reasonable attorneys' fees and 19 other expenses incurred as a direct result of the violation.
20 [Id.]

21 Likewise, the United State Supreme Court frequently speaks of "civil sanctions" 22 in the double jeopardy context; these reference make clear that "civil sanctions" are 23 statutory penalties. See, e.g., United States v. Halper, 490 U.S. 435, 436 (1989)
24 (referring to statutory penalties as "civil sanctions."); see also Austin v. United States, 25 509 U.S. 602 (1993) (same).

26 ²⁶ BLACK'S LAW DICTIONARY (5TH ED. 1979) at 1203. The United States Supreme 27 Court has repeatedly admonished courts to apply the plain, commonly understood 28 meaning of statutory language. See, e.g., Ernst & Ernst v. Hochfelder, 425 U.S. 185, 29 199 n.19-20 (1976) (relying on dictionary meaning of "device"); see also Addison v. Holly
30 Hill Fruit Products, Inc., 322 U.S. 607, 617-18 (1944).

1 Finally, the Ninth Circuit has also recognized the distinction between 2 "sanctions" and legal "requirements" such as might be imposed by statute or common 3 law:

4 State waste disposal standards, permits, and reporting 5 duties clearly are "requirements" for the purpose of § 6961.
6 Criminal sanctions, however, are not a "requirement" of state 7 law within the meaning of § 6961, but rather the means by 8 which the standards, permits, and reporting duties are enforced. Section 6961 plainly waives immunity to sanctions imposed to enforce injunctive relief, but this only makes more conspicuous its failure to waive immunity to criminal sanctions.

9 California v. Walters, 751 F.2d 977, 978 (9th Cir. 1984).

10 Because the preemptive scope of the IRCA is expressly limited to laws imposing 11 sanctions, the defendants' preemption argument is without merit.

12 13 VII. DEFENDANTS PROVIDE NO PROPER BASIS FOR STAYING 14 DISCOVERY

15 The mere pendency of a motion to dismiss is not a reason to stay discovery. As 16 one court has noted:

17 Had the Federal Rules contemplated that a motion to dismiss 18 under Fed.R.Civ.Pro. 12(b)(6) would stay discovery, the Rules would contain a provision to that effect.

19 Gray v. First Winthrop Corp., 133 F.R.D. 39, 40 (N.D. Cal. 1990). See also Cohn v. Taco
20 Bell Corp., 147 F.R.D. 154, 161-62 (N.D. Ill. 1993). Accordingly, an applicant for a stay 21 of discovery pending the resolution of a motion to dismiss "carries the heavy burden of 22 making a 'strong showing' why discovery should be denied." Gray, 133 F.R.D. at 40.
23 Courts require a "particular and specific" demonstration of need, as distinguished from 24 conclusory statements, in order to establish a strong showing for a stay. Id., see also 25 Twin City Fire Ins. Co. v. Employers Ins. of Wausau, 124 F.R.D. 652 (D. Nev. 1989); 26 Kiblen v. Retail Credit Co., 76 F.R.D. 402, 404 (E.D. Wash. 1977). A showing that

1 discovery may cause some inconvenience and expense is not sufficient – even if the 2 defendants attempt to make such a showing. Twin City Fire Ins. Co., 124 F.R.D. at 3 653.

4 Courts will not stay discovery even if the pending motion to dismiss is 5 "apparently meritorious." Twin City Fire Ins. Co., 124 F.R.D. at 653; see also Gray, 133
6 F.R.D. at 40. Rather, the standard is far stricter. A district court must be convinced 7 that the plaintiff will be unable to state a claim for relief. E.g., Twin City Fire Ins. Co., 8 124 F.R.D. at 653 (citing Wood v. McEwen, 644 F.2d 797, 801 (9th Cir. 1981), cert.
9 denied, 455 U.S. 942 (1982); B.R.S. Land Investors v. United States, 596 F.2d 353 (9th 10 Cir. 1979)). Thus, a request for a stay should be denied where the success of the 11 motion to dismiss is speculative. Cohn v. Taco Bell Corp., 147 F.R.D. at 162; United 12 States v. Board of Educ., 636 F. Supp. 1046, 1047 (N.D. Ill. 1986).

13 Here, defendants have made no effort to meet the strict standards for staying 14 discovery and their motion must therefore be denied.

15 A. Defendants Have Failed to Satisfy Their Burden of Demonstrating They 16 Are Entitled to a Stay

17 1. Defendants Have Made No Showing That Discovery Would Be 18 Unduly Burdensome

19 Defendants have not made any effort to demonstrate that discovery would be 20 unduly burdensome. Indeed, the defendants have not even received any discovery 21 requests from the plaintiffs. Accordingly, this Court cannot consider any claim of 22 burden defendants might proffer in their reply brief.

23 2. Defendants' Alleged Privacy Concerns Can Provide No Basis For 24 Staying Discovery

25 Defendants' sole proffered reason for staying discovery is that "[D]iscovery would 26 relate to sensitive/confidential information about employees' national origin, there [sic] social security numbers and information contained in I-9 Forms that are protected

1 from disclosure by federal law." Mtn. to Stay Discovery at 2. This reason, even if 2 credited, is insufficient.

3 As an initial matter, plaintiffs have already demonstrated that I-9 Forms are 4 fully discoverable. See supra at 17-19. Thus, even if the I-9 Forms were the only 5 discovery plaintiffs planned to seek, defendants' motion should be denied.

6 Moreover, plaintiffs' discovery will certainly not be limited to I-9 Forms. Once 7 that discovery is propounded, any legitimate privacy or confidentiality concerns can be 8 addressed through a protective order. Not surprisingly, defendants have cited no case 9 denying all discovery on the grounds that some potentially discoverable information 10 might be confidential or sensitive.

11 3. Defendants Have Not Demonstrated That Their Motion Will 12 Dispose Of The Entire Case

13 The Court should not consider granting the stay motion unless it is convinced 14 that the defendants' motion will dispose of the entire case. E.g., Twin City Fire Ins. Co., 15 124 F.R.D. at 653. As this brief demonstrates, the defendants are unlikely to succeed 16 in dismissing any part of this case. Even if the Court disagrees, it should still deny the 17 stay motion if it believes that any part of the case may survive.

18 VIII. CONCLUSION

19 In conclusion, defendants' Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) Motion to dismiss and stay 20 discovery must be denied.

21 DATED this 13th day of June, 2000.
