Rebuttal Expert Report of Brie Williams, M.D., M.S.

Parsons v. Ryan, No. 2:12-cv-00601-NVW (MEA) (D. Ariz.)

January 31, 2014

From his report, it does not appear that Dr. Mendel interviewed or reviewed the medical records of the prisoners discussed in my report. It also does not appear that he viewed the cells in ADC's isolation units, or the exercise facilities available to prisoners in those units. Nor does Dr. Mendel cite any medical literature in support of his conclusions.

Dr. Mendel criticizes my report for failing to address "the reason for the inmate's placement in a disciplinary unit," repeatedly referring to the units I inspected as "disciplinary units."¹ It is my understanding that these units serve a broader function than "disciplinary units" since the defendants' expert Richard Seiter explained that prisoners may be housed in these units for several reasons including because of the sentence they have received, because they are in protective custody, or for other reasons unrelated to any misconduct while in prison.² For this reason, it appears that Dr. Mendel's assumption that all prisoners in these units are there for disciplinary reasons is incorrect.

Dr. Mendel also states that I do not "list any experience providing care to incarcerated individuals."³ I have served as a consultant in California's San Quentin State Prison where I consulted on the care of patients age 50 and older.

Dr. Mendel also states that "Dr. Williams did not list the mental health history for any of the inmates mentioned in her report," and states that due to this alleged failure "it is not possible to determine whether it is safe to allow disciplinary unit inmates to exercise with others."⁴ First, it is simply untrue that I did not discuss prisoners' mental health history. For example, I note in the body of my report that one prisoner "has a history of Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder with suicidal ideation,"⁵ and in my notes (which constitute a part of my report) I repeatedly refer to prisoners' mental health diagnoses and treatment.

More fundamentally, it is not my opinion that prisoners must always be allowed to exercise with others. Rather, my opinion is that the denial of access to exercise spaces that allow sustained walking, and/or the housing of prisoners in conditions that contribute to social isolation or sensory deprivation, poses a substantial risk of serious harm to older prisoners and those with chronic medical conditions, and/or physical disabilities.

Dr. Mendel states that I do not discuss the length of time prisoners spend in isolation. It is my understanding that ADC surprisingly does not track the mean or median length of prisoners' stay in isolation.⁶ I have not found evidence that there is any upper limit on the amount of time an Arizona prisoner can spend in isolation, and ADC states that “Inmates serving death or life sentences could be housed in a location meeting Plaintiffs’ definition of ‘ISOLATION’ for upwards of 20 years.”⁷ It is my understanding that prisoners who are sentenced to death are automatically and permanently classified as maximum custody (and therefore placed in isolation), and prisoners with life sentences are automatically so classified for a minimum of two years.⁸ Thus, I am told by Plaintiffs’ attorneys that ADC policy requires that these prisoners spend a minimum of two years in ADC’s isolation units.⁹

In addition, ADC’s website indicates that many of the prisoners in ADC’s isolation units have been housed in those units for many months or even years. The website’s “Inmate Datasearch” function lists the date of a prisoner’s last movement. Listed below are some of the prisoners I interviewed in ADC’s isolation units during my inspection tours on August 14, 15, and 16, 2013. For each prisoner is listed the housing unit where I interviewed the prisoner and the date of his or her last movement, as indicated on ADC’s website on December 27, 2013.

The December 27, 2013 printouts for these prisoners from ADC's "Inmate Datasearch" function are attached as Exhibit A.

It is also my understanding that some of the named plaintiffs have spent years in ADC's isolation units. For example, it appears that Robert Gamez was incarcerated at Florence-Central Unit from 2007 to 2012, and has been at Eyman-Browning Unit since that time.¹⁰ It appears that Jackie Thomas has been incarcerated at either Eyman-Browning or Eyman SMU since 2007.¹¹

The risks and negative health effects of enforced idleness and lack of exercise occur quite rapidly. After five weeks of bedrest, decreased muscle mass in the lower extremities and bone mineral loss can be detected, as can hip, thigh, and calf muscle atrophy and bone loss.¹² As little as two weeks of bedrest has been found to launch the catabolic response that leads to muscle breakdown in healthy, younger volunteers.¹³

These risks and adverse health effects are magnified for persons with chronic health conditions. For example, in persons with diabetes, more sedentary time was associated with larger waste sizes, increased insulin, higher LDL ("bad cholesterol") and higher blood sugar in a study of more than 500 persons newly diagnosed with type 2 diabetes.¹⁴ The study, done over a one-year period, found that decreased activity predicts worsening metabolic variables in patients with diabetes.¹⁵ Similarly, for persons with osteoarthritis, inactivity leads to muscle weakness and to worsened pain and decreased mobility.¹⁶

According to the United States Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, older adults need at least two hours and thirty minutes of moderate-intensity aerobic activity (i.e., brisk walking) every week, as well as muscle-strengthening activities on two or more days a week that work all major muscle groups (legs, hips, back, abdomen, chest, shoulders, and arms).¹⁷ Comprehensive exercise programs (incorporating walking, aerobics, strength training, etc.) are most effective for elderly persons with medical conditions. One study showed that 6 months of comprehensive exercise had several positive physical outcomes for elderly persons with chronic conditions, including: grip strength, flexibility, oxygen saturation, metabolic equivalent.¹⁸ In a study of older women, moving for five or more hours per day was associated with lower blood pressure; regular movement throughout the day is important in managing hypertension in older women.¹⁹ Walking is particularly important to prevent or slow loss of function in the deconditioned or frail elderly.²⁰ It is reasonable to assume that persons who are confined to a small space nearly all of the time would benefit from even MORE physical activity, since the recommendations are for the general public who, at a minimum, generally experience a degree of baseline physical activity such as walking from room to room in their house.

Finally, according to the National Osteoporosis Foundation, persons over 50 and persons who are institutionalized are high-risk populations for vitamin D deficiency, which can lead to osteoporosis. These persons should therefore get at least 800-1000 IU of vitamin D daily.²¹ Spending time outside with access to direct sunlight can address this higher susceptibility to vitamin D deficiency.
